BIG RUSH FOR TICKETS.

Six Hundred in Line at Opening of Harvard-Dartmouth Sale.

BOSTON, Nov. 11.—Nearly 1,000 Harvard alumni lined up in front of the Harvard Athletic Association's temporary ticket office on State street today, in the hope of securing some of the coveted 7,000 extra seats which have been built into the Stadium for the game between the Harvard and Dartmouth football elevens next Saturday. As each graduate was allowed to buy four seats on every proxy held by him, those early in the line bought in abundance, one man carrying away 56 tickets. It is estimated that the first 700 applicants secured all the 7,000 seats. Such a rush for tickets had not been anticipated by the athletic management. When the sale started at 9 o'clock there were more than 600 persons in line by actual count, and during the next hour the number was swelled to 1,000.

UNDERGRADUATES CUT DOWN.

Further Attempt to Satisfy Demand For Yale-Harvard Tickets.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 11.—In a further attempt to satisfy in some measure the enormous demand for tickets to the Yale-Harvard football game here, the Yale ticket management has cut down the number of tickets to be allowed to members of the undergraduate bodies, with the exception of the academic and scientific Seniors, from the regular three to two. After having cut down the graduates to two tickets each, as announced yesterday, the management was still 200 short of the number necessary to satisfy the demand, and the further restriction was decided upon. Even this, it is stated, does not fully meet the situation.

ADVISERS REALLY ARE RESPONSIBLE.

Tragic for Such a Ruler to be in Such a Plight.

Chancellor von Buelow Sharply Attacked in Reichstag.

BERLIN, Nov. 11.—The Reichstag was again crowded today, when the debate on the interview with Emperor William published in the London Telegraph October 28 was resumed. The house listened with undiminished attention while the constitutionality of Emperor William's private interposition in the foreign affairs of the nation was discussed. Chancellor von Buelow and all the other ministers, including Baron von Kiderlen-Waechter, acting foreign minister, were present, and the diplomatic and other galleries were crowded.

Baron Gamp, Conservative, said he thought that the bitterness shown yesterday by Herr Liebermann von Sonnenberg, the agrarian and anti-Semite, was no way to treat such a sorrowful subject. It was tragic, he said, that a sovereign with so many admirable qualities should find himself in such a plight. His Majesty's trouble might, rather, to be ascribed to his responsible advisers, who, since the time of Bismarck, never have been able to tell His Majesty plainly his constitutional duties. Caprivi was a soldier who always defined his duty as merely to obey the Prince of Hohenlohe, Baron Gamp continued. Valuable as he was to the empire, he never obtained a stronghold over the emperor. Chancellor von Buelow has at times exerted considerable influence over His Majesty, but we would like to know the basis of the conviction that the emperor will be more reserved in the future than in the past.

Baron Gamp was followed by several other members of the Reichstag, who reviewed the acts of the emperor and complained sharply of the chancellor's course in not resisting imperial excursions beyond the constitutional frontiers. Carl Schrader, Radical, said Emperor William should be in Berlin, attending to affairs of state, rather than at Friedrichshafen, watching the ascensions of the Zeppelin airships. Oscar von Normann, Extreme Conservative, said that his wing of the Conservatives is satisfied with the explanation given by Prince von Buelow, and Konrad Haussmann, Bavarian Radical, attacked the conduct of the chancellor throughout the entire incident of the Telegraph interview.

The Reichstag adjourned today without having concluded the debate on the interpellations concerning the imperial interview.

EMPEROR SENT LONG DESPATCH

Wires Kept Busy an Hour After News of Reichstag Proceedings.

DONAUESCHINGEN, Baden, Nov. 11.—A telegraphic report of the proceedings in the Reichstag yesterday was telegraphed to Emperor William, who is a guest of Prince von Fuerstenberg. The last instalment was transmitted to the castle at 9 p. m. Three hours later the telegraph office was busy for one hour with the sending of a despatch from the castle to Berlin.

MANY NOVEL PROVISIONS.

Bill for Universal Suffrage in Hungary Presented to Deputies.

BUDAPEST, Nov. 11.—The bill providing for universal suffrage in Hungary was presented to the chamber of deputies today by Count Andrassy, minister of the interior. It contains many novel provisions, designed, as the preamble points out, to "prevent the political power from falling wholly into the hands of illiterates."

The bill provides that every Hungarian over 24 years of age who has resided in any commune for one year is entitled to vote. Illiterates, however, will be assembled in groups of ten, and each group can select a single elector. Thus these classes will have only one vote for every ten men. As a further means of "preserving the ascendancy of the intelligent classes," the bill provides for a system of plural voting; all electors over 32 years who have fulfilled their military duty, and who have three children, have two votes. Workmen who have spent five years at the same trade, as well as workmen who have graduated from specified classes of the secondary schools, also are given a double vote. Electors who have completed the full course of the secondary schools, or who pay $20 in direct annual taxation, can vote three times.

THOUSANDS FOLLOW FUNERAL.

Body of Victorien Sardou Laid at Rest with Simple Ceremonies.

PARIS, Nov. 11.—Following a religious service at the Church of St. Francis de Sales, the body of Victorien Sardou, French author and dramatist, was laid at rest today at Marley. At the church eulogies on the dead were delivered by representatives of the government, of the French Academy and of the Society of Dramatic Authors. Those present at the ceremonies, which were very simple, in accordance with the wishes of the dead man, included the most distinguished Frenchmen in the field of art, literature, politics and the stage. Thousands followed the funeral to the cemetery. Tonight the Comedie Francaise and the other theatres where Sardou's plays usually are produced are closed.

Sara Bernhardt sent the following telegram from Cairo: "France loses one of its glories, half Paris a friend, all the unhappy a protector, and we artists our beloved master, Victorien Sardou."

TEN MORE FOR SHEFFIELD.

His Net Gain in Official Count of Three Providence Districts.

(Special despatch to the News.)

PROVIDENCE, Nov. 11.—The State Returning Board this afternoon completed the official count of the votes cast in the Fourth, Fifth and Sixth districts of the First ward of Providence, Mr. Sheffield, the Republican candidate for Congress, making a net gain of 10 votes in the three districts.

In the Fourth district the official count gave Colonel Sheffield 58 votes, the number by the warden's returns. Mr. Granger received 249 by the official count as against 250 in the warden's count, a gain of one for Sheffield.

In the Fifth district Sheffield received 78 by the official count, as against 75 by the warden's, while Granger had 234 in both counts. This was an additional gain of three for Sheffield.

In the Sixth district the returning board gave Sheffield 217 votes against 212 given to him by the ward officials. Granger was credited with 221 votes, against 22 in the warden's returns, a gain of six for Sheffield in this district.

[Special dispatch to the News.]

PROVIDENCE, Nov. 11.—Nathaniel S. Fiske, charged with driving an automobile beyond the speed limit, was before Judge Mumford of the superior court today, on an appeal from a Sixth District court sentence, and was fined by Judge Mumford $100 and costs. The judge in imposing the fine spoke severely regarding automobile drivers who fail to stop when called upon by the police to do so.

A man named Peterson was placed on trial in Judge Mumford's room in the superior court today on a charge of exceeding the speed limit, this being the first case to be tried by a jury under the new automobile law.

URGED TO BECOME EVANGELIST.

Bryan Might Become More Than President, Says Admirer.

BURLINGTON, Kan., Nov. 11.—Rev. French C. Oliver, who is holding revival meetings here, has issued an open letter to W. J. Bryan urging the Nebraskan to become an evangelist, and predicting that Mr. Bryan would become the equal of the Apostle Paul.

"Personally, your three defeats have been three sources of sorrow to me," writes Mr. Oliver, "as I have hoped to see you elected to the Presidency. Who knows perhaps God has withheld the Presidency from you in order that you may become more to your country than President. I am firmly convinced that one ambassador of Christ of your calibre is worth more to this nation than 10,000 Presidents."

TARIFF PROGRAM PLANNED BY PAYNE.

No General Wish for Change Was Expressed Tuesday.

Conflicting Views Regarding Duties on Paints and Colors.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—The committee on ways and means of the House today continued its hearing begun yesterday on the schedule for chemicals, oils and paints. These public hearings, which are for the purpose of gathering information useful in the work of revising the tariff, are part of the tariff plan proposed by Chairman Payne on the floor of the House last May. Mr. Payne then said: "We propose to call the whole committee together immediately after the election, and invite people to come in here who have knowledge on the subject and to impart such information as they are able to give to the whole committee, Republicans and Democrats. After those hearings are closed, we propose to call together the majority members of the committee, as was done with the Wilson bill, and to ask our Democratic friends—or, rather, to excuse them from attendance on the sessions of the majority of the committee while we are framing a tariff bill. When we have framed it we will call them in again and submit our work to them, and, finally, we will submit our work to the Congress. It will be a revision of the tariff; it will be a protective tariff; it will be a maximum and minimum tariff, I believe, putting us on an equality with France, Germany and Russia in that respect. That is the Republican program."

There was little argument presented to the committee at yesterday's hearing to indicate any general desire for a change, either higher or lower, in the present rates of duty on articles coming under schedule "A" of the Dingley tariff. Today, however, there were indications of conflicting views regarding the present duties on certain paints and colors, it being claimed by some persons that certain of these articles should be reduced. On the other hand, E. H. Dyer of St. Louis, representing the Paint Manufacturers' Association of the United States, stated before the committee yesterday that the 80 or more paint manufacturers belonging to that association believe the duties now levied are not too high, considering the comparative cost of labor and material. Hens in the debates of Congress, where Manufacturers interested in the production of coal tar dyes and colors were first heard by the committee today. Frederick Schrellop and Isaac F. Stone of Buffalo, N. Y., asked for an increase of 10 per cent over the present advalorem rate of 30 per cent on colors and dyes. They also advocated the putting on the free list of certain raw materials used by them, on which there is now a duty of 20 per cent. They claimed that this duty and the higher cost of labor here rendered it impossible to compete with the German product.

Speaking, as he said for a majority of the dry color manufacturers, Arthur Somers of Brooklyn, N. Y., said: "The less the committee does with the dry color schedule the better pleased we will be. The conditions today are practically the same as those which prevailed when the Dingley tariff was framed."

Former Representative M. E. Rhodes of Missouri advocated an increase of duty on barytes, which is used in manufacturing. He declared that Missouri had been carried for Taft in the last election because the people believe in a protective tariff.

WILL DEMAND A HEARING.

Leather Interests Join Forces; Will Appear Before Committee.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—Citing that the recently issued call for hearings on tariff revision now going on at Washington does not mention hides, interests represented by the National Shoe Manufacturers' Association and importers of hides and leather have joined forces, with the intention of demanding a hearing before the ways and means committee of the House. These interests further assert that the removal of the duty on hides has been a live issue for a long time, and that they are being discriminated against through the Western meat packers. Several conferences have been held here and in Boston, with the result that a committee will be sent to Washington to appear before the committee.

TO ATTEND TARIFF HEARING.

Connecticut Tobacco Farmers Satisfied With Present Law.

HARTFORD, Conn., Nov. 11.—A delegation of tobacco growers from this section, with Marcus L. Floyd of Tariffville as chairman, will go to Washington, to be present Friday at the hearings which the Congressional committee on ways and means, which has begun its hearings on tariff revisions, will give on the tobacco question. This action was decided on at a meeting of the farmers last night. It is understood that the Connecticut men are satisfied with the present law, and are opposed to any change.

REMANDED WITHOUT BAIL.

Colonel Cooper Charged with Murder of Ex-Senator Carmack.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 11.—While the excitement over the tragedy Monday in which E. W. Carmack, former United States Senator from Tennessee, and editor of the Tennessean of this city, was shot and killed by Robin Cooper, a young attorney of Nashville, and son of Colonel Duncan B. Cooper, a close friend of Governor Patterson, has to a certain extent abated, the tragedy is still the chief topic of conversation, both in this city and throughout the state. Colonel Cooper, who was with his son when the latter shot McCarmack, has been remanded to jail without bail, charged with murder. Young Cooper remains under guard at a local hospital, where his wound is being treated. His preliminary trial on the charge of murder will be held as soon as he is able to leave the hospital.

The friends of the Coopers say that the affair was merely a street duel, in which both sides met and began firing. The friends of Senator Carmack assert that the killing was the result of a conspiracy in which men high in authority were connected; that Mr. Carmack was waylaid and assassinated; that when he left the Tennessean office for his boarding house the fact was telephoned from a house near the Tennessean, and that thus the Coopers were notified that the Senator was on his way.

It now develops, according to friends of Mr. Carmack, that a third person was with the Coopers just before the shooting—a former county official, who is a close personal friend of both the Coopers and Governor Patterson. Friends of the dead Senator intimate that there will be sensational developments regarding the affair.

VETERAN OF THREE WARS.

General Chamberlain Dies of Infirmities Incident to Old Age.

WORCESTER, Mass., Nov. 10.—General Samuel Chamberlain of Barre Plains, a veteran of the Mexican, Indian and Civil wars, died at St. Vincent Hospital, this city, today, from the infirmities incident to old age.

General Chamberlain was born at Center Harbor, N. H., in 1827, but had lived most of his life in Cambridge, Mass. He served throughout the Mexican war, then fought against the Indians on the Western frontier, after which he served i the Union army during the Civil war. He organized the first troop of cavalry recruited in Massachusetts. For 12 years he was warden of the Massachusetts state prison at Charlestown. For the past 15 years he had lived at Barre Plains, where he owned a beautiful estate. He is survived by a widow and three daughters—Mrs. George I. Peavear of Boston, Mrs. James A. Lattimer of Cambridge and Mrs. George M. Brown of Hartford, Conn.

VIOLATED THE CAUCUS LAWS.

Brookline Judge Finds Twenty-three Voters Guilty of Fraud.

DEDHAM, Mass., Nov. 10.—Twenty-three voters of Brookline were guilty of violating the caucus laws at the Republican primary elections at Brookline September 22, according to the report made to the justices of the superior court today by Judge Charles F. Perkins of the Brookline municipal court, who had conducted an inquest into the alleged fraud. Judge Perkins's report states that five men who had voted at the Democratic primaries April 22 actually did vote at the Republican primaries September 22, while 18 men who had voted at the April Democratic primaries applied for ballots at the Republican primaries September 22, but were refused.

The report of Judge Perkins is the outcome of the contest between John A. Curtis and Norman H. White for the representative nomination from Brookline. Each candidate claimed that his opponent had secured Democratic votes in behalf of their respective candidacies.

ESTIMATE OF CROP RAISED.

This Year's Aggregated Three Per Cent Greater Than Last Year.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—The department of Agriculture today issued a preliminary estimate of the production of the crops of the United States, showing that corn, wheat, oats and eight other crops, representing approximately 70 per cent of the value of all farm crops, this year aggregated about 3 per cent greater than a year ago, and 2.4 per cent greater than the average for the past five years.

TIE IN NEWFOUNDLAND.

Premier and Opposition Each Have 18 Supporters in Legislature.

ST. JOHNS, N. F.—Nov. 10.—Complete returns from the general elections of November 2 show that Sir Robert Bond, the premier, and Sir Edward Morris, the leader of the Opposition forces, will each have 18 supporters in the legislature. Late today the vote of the last district to be heard from, St. Barbe, was received, showing the election of Clapp, the Bond candidate, by 305 majority.

The situation is the most unique in Newfoundland political records, and may be settled only by the ordering of another general election, which will undoubtedly be done by the lieutenant governor, if neither party is able to form a government which will have the confidence of the legislature.

In the third division of Harbor Grace Hon. Mr. Dawe, minister of fisheries in the Bond cabinet, was elected on the face of the returns by only one majority. Next week a recount will be held before the supreme court. Should the recount show the defeat of Dawe, the Opposition would have two majority, but a Speaker would have to be chosen, thus leaving a margin of one vote on the floor of the legislature, a majority too slight for any government to depend upon for any length of time.

If the parties continue to stand 18 to 18, the election of a Speaker by either side would give the Opposition side a slight advantage on the floor, but as the parties now stand there is no certainty that a Speaker can be chosen unless by mutual agreement. What the outcome of the deadlock will be is problematical.

EARTHQUAKES IN CALIFORNIA.

Mountain Crags Seem to Totter; Miners Thrown from Bunks.

SAN BERNARDINO, Cal., Nov. 10.—Death valley and the surrounding country are in the throes of a series of earthquakes, which began three weeks ago, and the most violent of which occurred last Wednesday morning before daylight. Samuel Lawrence, who has reached here, says that for three weeks there have been one or two rumbles daily.

The shocks were light until Wednesday, when the crags of the Funeral Range seemed to totter. Miners were tossed from their bunks, camp equipment was scattered about, horses and mules stampeded and immense boulders were thrown down. At daybreak the miners left the camp in consternation.

SEATED BY FOUR VOTES

O'Connell Has Lead in Bay State Recount; Galvin Continues Fight.

BOSTON, Nov. 10.—A recount of the vote in the Tenth Congressional district, the first returns of which declared Joseph F. O'Connell was returned to Congress by a narrow margin of 42 votes, when completed tonight showed that O'Connell still led his Republican opponent, J. Mitchell Galvin, but by only four votes.

Mr. Galvin will contest the seating of O'Connell, his first act being to notify the election board to have the ballots preserved. He contests the legality of several hundred votes cast for his opponent, while the O'Connell forces also question the legality of several hundred votes cast in Quincy and which it is claimed the voting machine failed to record.

AMERICAN FLAG INVOLVED.

Riot at Granada Which Becomes Diplomatic Affair.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—A celebration of the election of Mr. Taft by three Americans at Granada, Nicaragua, according to an official report received here today, ended in a riotous gathering and demonstration which resulted in a dispute over the treatment of the American flag.

Minister Coolidge, in reporting the affair to the State Department, says that three Americans who led the celebration were jailed by Nicaraguans to one of whom they finally turned over the flag, and this man, with the flag in his possession, was later arrested.

The local authorities explained that there was no intention to make the arrest because of the man's connection with the celebration, but that he and others who were placed in jail had been connected with some riotous acts and some of them were plotting against the government, one advocating annexation with the United States in a speech.

The incident is regarded as closed. The Nicaraguan officials have assured Minister Coolidge that there was no intention of mistreating the Stars and Stripes.

REICHSTAG CRITICISES KAISER.

All Factions Join in Condemning Emperor's Utterances.

BERLIN, Nov. 10.—Emperor William, without a defender on the floor of the Chamber, was condemned in an unprecedented manner in the Reichstag today for his interview relative to the Boer war which was published in England. The Conservatives, representing largely the landed nobility joined with the Socialists, the Radicals and the National Liberals in the onslaught.

The Extreme Liberals are declaring tonight that the day's proceedings mark the beginning of a conflict between the crown and Parliament which may end in Germany having a ministry responsible to Parliament and not to the crown alone.

Chancellor von Buelow made a 15-minute address, but spoke in a listless manner, so different from his usual spirit that it excited universal comment. He said it was the most difficult task of his political life to resolve to remain in office but that he considered it his duty in this difficult period to continue to serve the emperor and the nation.

The chancellor's unwonted lack of dash and energy is explained by a person high in his confidence who is authority for the statement that he had previously told the emperor that neither he nor his successors could remain in office unless the Kaiser would in the future bridle his tongue.

The criticism of the Kaiser and his treatment of the constitution, the emperor's court and the emperor's freedom of speech in today's debate went to lengths that astonished the older members and all observers acquainted with the traditional caution of the Chamber. Americans who were present declared that they had never seen more license in the debates of Congress, where the members go to practically any length that they see fit.

Prince von Buelow in his explanation spoke solemnly and without making use of any dramatic effects. The House received his explanation in icy silence, instead of giving it that cordial applause which as a general thing follows the chancellor's fine parliamentary declarations.

BAIL REFUSED MORSE.

Denial of Application for Release Comes as Crushing Blow.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—Charles W. Morse, the former multi-millionaire, who is under sentence of 15 years at hard labor, received a hard blow today when the United States court of appeals refused to admit him to bail. The financier, who 18 months ago held a dominant position in the business world, must now remain in the Tombs prison at least until December 2, when arguments will be made on the writ of error that has been granted in his case.

Judges Lacombe, Ward and Coxe rendered late this afternoon the decision by which bail was denied. A loophole, but not one which is considered promising, is left open to Morse's counsel in the decision, and that is that the judges decided that, while bail was refused, the action was taken "without prejudice to a renewal of the application after a bill of particulars is filed."

The judges stated briefly that, as the trial judge in the proceedings against Morse had refused to admit him to bail, the reviewing judges were not prepared on the papers submitted to them to make a disposition of the motion.

Morse had been hopeful of gaining his release from the Tombs today, and the denial of bail came with crushing force. His wife and son Harry had been with him in the jail during the afternoon, and they encouraged him in the belief that he would be free by nightfall if the judges could reach a decision by that time. Mrs. Morse and her son left the prison before the decision had been rendered and the news was conveyed to the prisoner by an assistant in his counsel's office.

While Morse tried to hide his disappointment, he felt too greatly cast down to do so. He walked to the rear of his cell and sat on the edge of his hard, narrow berth and refused to make any comment. A few minutes later he regained some of his composure and the expression on his face changed.

Later Charles E. Littlefield and Clifford Walker, his chief advisers, and Morse entered animatedly into a discussion of further plans for obtaining a favorable decision on the question of bail, but no announcement was made as to what would be done.

There is one feature of the case which is particularly disagreeable to Morse. No matter how long he is compelled to remain a prisoner in the Tombs, the time will not count as a part of the 15 years he must serve in the federal prison at Atlanta, Ga., in case he loses his fight for a new trial.

Judge Hough gave as his reason for refusing to admit Morse to bail the fact that the case was not an extraditable one and that it would be easy for Morse to furnish bail through a bonding company, as the prisoner was worth $22,000,000. Morse in an affidavit presented to the judges of the United States court of appeals yesterday denied that he was a millionaire, saying that he had not enough money or securities to meet his obligations.

These were the principal points considered by the judges in arriving at their decision to deny bail. It is said that the Morse attorneys will take advantage of the opportunity to file a bill of particulars.

DR. HARDING ELECTED BISHOP.

Rector at Washington Chosen to Succeed Rt. Rev. H. Y. Satterlee.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—Rev. Dr. Alfred H. Harding, for the past 22 years rector of St. Paul's Church, this city, today was elected Bishop of Washington to succeed the late Henry Y. Satterlee, at the fourth meeting of the thirteenth annual convention of this diocese.

Rev. Charles H. Brent, Bishop of the Philippines, who was elected twice, declined both times, and Rev. Dr. Mann of Trinity Church, Boston, elected at the third meeting, also declined.

Four ballots were taken today. Rev. Dr. Randolph H. McKim of Epiphany Church, this city, a strong candidate in all the previous elections, led on the first three ballots today. Dr. Harding showed no strength until the fourth ballot.

Other candidates who were strong factors were Bishop William Griswold of Salina, Kan., and Rev. Dr. James R. Winchester of Memphis, Tenn. Others named were Rev. C. L. Slattery, rector of Christ Church, Springfield, Mass.; Rev. Dr. C. E. Buck, Rev. Dr. W. L. Devries and Rev. Dr. Edwin Burrows, all of this city.

SOURCES OF HISTORY.

Historian Should Not Build His Structure With Second Hand Material.

[University Magazine.]

One of the really notable features of modern thought is the changed attitude toward history. It is no longer possible for the historian to build his structure with second-hand material, however effectively he may use that material, or however attractively he may remodel it. To gain a hearing from intelligent men he must build his work upon the sure foundation of original sources; and he must leave his foundation exposed so that all who go by may test the character of his material and the faithful use he has made of it. If he would have it recognized as literature he must also build artistically, with all the skill of a literary craftsman—but that is beside the present point.

To meet the needs of the modern historian it has become necessary to gather from far and near the primary documents that constitute his raw material. The tremendous importance of this task has been gradually dawning upon the governing bodies of civilized lands, with the result that national archives have been established at public expense, to be the repositories of manuscript material of every description bearing upon the history of the country. The British government inaugurated a movement of this kind some years ago, and has already made immense strides in the garnering and safeguarding of material pertaining to the history of the United Kingdom.

With that energy and generosity which characterizes activities for the general welfare of the United States, it also has made notable progress in the same direction. Efforts, more or less well directed, have been made toward the same end in France, Germany, Spain, Italy and other continental countries. It remained, however, for the people of Holland to set an example which all other countries might well follow. With native caution and thoroughness, never more happily directed, the government of the Netherlands appointed a commission of advice to survey the whole field of historical material affecting its own country. The most expert intelligence available by the nation was first to consider with deliberate care the question what most needed to be done, and was then to devise a general and relatively permanent plan for doing it. With the admirably full and scholarly report of this commission before it the government was in a position to establish a department of national archives, into which could be gathered, with the minimum expenditure of time and energy, the documentary sources of the history of the Netherlands. This economical and businesslike policy stands in rather a striking contrast to the haphazard methods of other countries.

Canada's advent upon the scene of archival labor is comparatively recent—at least, so far as really effective work is concerned. The first archivist of the dominion, the late Dr. Douglas Brymner, worked for years in an atmosphere which could scarcely be described as sympathetic. That he accomplished so much is due almost entirely to the unconquerable enthusiasm of the man. That he left so much to be done was in no wise any fault of his. With rare good fortune the Canadian government was able to secure as his successor one who combines the scholarship and genius for research, the "nose" for hidden documents, of his predecessor, with uncommon executive ability and, what is peculiarly important today, a keen appreciation of the importance of making the manuscript riches of the archives readily accessible by means of careful classification and exhaustive indexes, as well as the desire to meet in a generous spirit the needs of those investigators who, for one reason or another, are unable to visit the archives personally.

Ralph Blaisdell, auditor for the Harriman system in the Northwest, has "for the good of the service," issued an order forbidding employes in his department visiting saloons or liquor houses for any purpose whatsoever. The order affects about 500 hundred employes.

OYSTERS.

Many Recipes Given May be Easily Made in Chafing Dish.

The Bivalves Should be Scalded in Their Own Liquor Until The Edges Curl Up.

[Cornelia C. Bedford.]

Stewed Oysters—Pick over and wash [illegible] oysters, put them in a [illegible] add one scant tablespoonful [illegible] one quarter of a teaspoonful of [illegible], one-quarter of a teaspoonful of salt, one-quarter of a teaspoonful of white pepper, and shake over the fire until the gills begin to curl. Pour in quickly three cupfuls of milk, [illegible] scalded, cook for a moment [illegible] and serve. If desired the [illegible] may be slightly thickened.

Scalloped Oysters—For every quart of oysters take one cupful of bread or cracker crumbs, two tablespoonfuls of butter, one-half of a cupful of rich milk or thick cream, salt and pepper to taste. Wash and thoroughly drain the oysters, being especially careful to see that there are no small pieces of shell adhering. Melt the butter, add the seasoned crumbs, and stir until they are well greased. Cover the bottom of a greased baking-dish with a layer of crumbs, being sure that a layer of crumbs, being sure that the oysters are well covered. Cover the top and bake for 20 minutes in a moderately hot oven. Remove the cover, brown and serve at once in a baking dish. Equal quantities of milk and oyster liquor may be used to give more of the oyster flavor. While stated quantities are given here, they cannot [illegible] fixed quantities, for the crumbs may not be sufficient to cover the oysters as liked, or more moisture may be required. This is largely determined by the baking, although very [illegible] dry crumbs absorb more liquid than those less so. The scallop should be baked covered until the juice bubbles up on top, then uncovered to brown. And the mistake is often made of buying an inferior grade of oysters to scallop. The cooking process is such that they shrivel considerably at the best, and if the best results are wanted, good oysters should be purchased.

Oyster Cutlets—Boil 12 oysters in their own liquor for about two minutes; drain, chop the oysters and put one gill of the liquor over the fire in a saucepan. Rub together one ounce of butter and two even tablespoonfuls of flour; stir into the boiling oyster liquor until you have a smooth, thick paste; add the yolk of one egg, chopped oysters, and one teaspoonful of finely chopped parsley. Mix, add a palatable seasoning of salt and pepper; and turn out to cool. When cool, form into four cutlets, and put them aside until you are ready to dip and roll.

Deviled Oysters—For every 25 oysters take two tablespoonfuls of cream, the yolks of two eggs, one tablespoonful of butter, one tablespoonful of flour, and one tablespoonful of chopped parsley, one teaspoonful of salt and red pepper to taste. Drain the oysters; strain the liquor. Return the oysters to it and put in a saucepan over the fire. Let it come to the boiling point, skim and drain, saving the liquor. Chop the oysters. Return the liquor to the fire with the butter and flour rubbed together until smooth, and stir until it thickens. Beat the yolks of the eggs light, add the cream, and add to the oyster liquor with chopped oysters. Stir over the fire for a minute only. Season and fill the greased shells with the mixture. Either oyster, ordinary scallop, or silver shells may be used. Cover the top with fine bread crumbs, and brown in a quick oven.

Baked Oysters and Spaghetti—Break into small pieces and boil one quarter of a pound of spaghetti in plenty of boiling salted water for 25 minutes, or until tender. Drain. Scald one pint of oysters in their own liquor and drain. Grease a baking dish; put in a layer of spaghetti, then a layer of oysters, and season with salt and pepper. Continue until all are used, having the last layer spaghetti. Pour over one cupful of cream sauce, cover the top with bread crumbs, and bake for 15 minutes in a quick oven.

Little Pigs in Blankets—Drain large, fat oysters and dust with pepper. Wrap each in a thin slice of bacon from which the skin has been removed, and fasten with a small wooden toothpick. Grease a frying-pan with a piece of bacon, and then fry the little pigs until the bacon is brown and crisp. Serve without removing the picks.

Oysters a la Richelieu—Put one tablespoonful of butter in a saucepan or chafing-dish. When melted, add one quarter of a teaspoonful of paprika, two tablespoonfuls of chopped celery and two dozen large oysters free from [illegible]. Cover and when plump add [illegible] tablespoonfuls of sherry and serve.

Oysters [illegible] Coquille—Scald one [illegible] of oysters in their own liquor, then drain. Melt one tablespoonful of butter in a saucepan without browning, add a tablespoonful of flour, stir until smooth, add one-half of a cupful of [illegible] from a can of mushrooms and one-half of a cupful of cream. Stir until smooth, add one tablespoonful of [illegible] chopped fine, half a can of mushrooms chopped and the oysters. Mix well and season to taste with salt and pepper. Fill scallop shells with the mixture, cover the top with [illegible] crumbs and dots of butter and [illegible] quick oven.

Oyster Kromeskies—Make a batter [illegible] cupful of flour, one-half [illegible] cupful of water, the yolks of two [illegible] one-half of a teaspoonful of salt, [illegible] pepper, one tablespoonful of [illegible]. Beat well, cut in the [illegible] white and stand in a [illegible] two hours. For each [illegible] take a moderate-sized oyster [illegible] thin slice of lemon, pin [illegible] wooden toothpick, dip [illegible] batter and fry in smoking-hot [illegible] Remove the skewer before serving.

[illegible] Oysters—Drain the oysters [illegible] cupful of cold water over [illegible] of the sieve with the [illegible] should be taken that [illegible] shell adhere to the oysters [illegible] sauce in the proportion [illegible] tablespoonful of butter [illegible] tablespoonfuls of flour and a [illegible] to every pint of oysters. [illegible] oyster liquid in [illegible] may be used if preferred [illegible] butter without browning [illegible] flour and stir until [illegible] cream and cook, stirring [illegible] until it thickens. Put [illegible] a farina boiler to keep [illegible] the oysters are scalded in [illegible] Cook until they look [illegible] edges curl. Drain, add [illegible] season to taste and [illegible] toast. Salt and pepper [illegible] or celery salt [illegible].

[illegible] Melt two tablespoonfuls [illegible] add one slice of [illegible] until pale brown. Add [illegible] of flour; stir until [illegible] one cupful of stewed [illegible] thickened, add one [illegible] oysters and cook until [illegible] have curled. Add one [illegible] pepper sauce, one [illegible] of salt and one [illegible] chopped parsley and [illegible].

MIGHT HAVE CHANGED RESULTS.

Number of Citizens in State Who Failed to Cast Votes in Recent Election Was 23,050.

Had the 17,000 citizens of Providence who neglected their citizenship duties last week qualified and voted, they might have given Bryan, or Debs, or Chafin, a plurality in the city, and they could have elected a full Socialist or Prohibition Assembly ticket. Had the 23,000 stay-at-homes in the state availed themselves of their citizenship rights, they could have elected the full Democratic state ticket, and both Democratic candidates for Congress; or had they cast their lot with the Republicans, they would have swelled Taft's and Pothier's votes into the seventy thousands.

Rhode Island cast the largest vote in its history. The total votes for President and governor, according to the election officers' count, were respectively, 71,874 and 73,064. The largest previous total was that for governor in 1904, when 63,105 votes were cast for the several candidates. In some of the towns at the recent elections, more votes were given Assembly candidates, or for and against license than the gubernatorial candidates received. Comparing the aggregate figures for each town and city this year with those of the gubernatorial election in 1904, it was found that all of them except Jamestown, New Shoreham, Scituate, Lincoln, Westerly and Cumberland, have increased their totals. The tables which follow shows in detail how many qualified, how may did, and how many did not vote:

	Qualified voters, 1908.	Voted 1908.	Percentage of qualified absentees

Coventry,	1,129	921	18.42
South Kingstown,	1,260	1,062	15.71
Lincoln,	1,459	1,287	11.21
Westerly,	1,600	1,291	19.31
Burrillville,	1,709	1,430	16.31
Bristol,	1,710	1,424	16.73
Cumberland,	1,812	1,478	18.43
East Providence,	2,810	2,348	16.44
Central Falls,	3,460	2,712	21.62
Cranston,	3,492	2,798	19.87
Woonsocket,	4,164	3,732	10.37
Warwick,	4,652	3,813	18.04
Newport,	5,420	4,272	21.18
Pawtucket,	10,635	8,689	18.29
Providence,	31,672	27,340	13.68
Total,	89,398	74,624	15.91

It should be explained that the 74,624 aggregate represents the largest vote polled in each municipality for any office or for license. The figures for Charlestown need verification, and are probably incorrect, as the returns as published credit it with having given Chafin, the Prohibition candidate for President, 72 votes, while 22 is the largest number who voted for any other Prohibition candidate. The vote for Chafin was probably 22, and if so, there were 82 absentees, or 20.29 per cent of the number who might have voted.

North Smithfield has the smallest percentage of absentees, while leaving Charlestown out of the list—Middletown is next, followed in the order given, by Woonsocket, East Greenwich, Lincoln and Providence. The proportion of votes to voters in this city is greater than on any election in recent years, but if judged upon the basis of possible voters, 88.86 per cent of its eligibles either neglected to qualify or neglected to vote. New Shoreham, only, shows a larger proportion of political shirks, and it is suspected that that town's voting lists have for many years contained the names of a considerable number of persons who could not be found on the island on election day, or on any other day in the year.

An examination of the votes received by the various candidates shows that Providence was snowed under by the rest of the state, large as its vote was. It wanted Arnold for governor, giving him a plurality of 1,458 votes; yet Pothier comes to the Seekonk with a safe margin of 8,647 ballots. It gave Granger 1,835 more than Sheffield, but the latter comes up the bay with a census of 1905, had a population of 198,635 and the rest of the First Congressional district 64,871. With more than three fourths of the population of this district, it was not able this year to dictate the choice of the man who should represent the district in Washington.

PEOPLE WITH "FACULTY"

A definition of this word "faculty" by Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe is of interest: "The Widow Scudder was one of the sort of women who reign queens in whatever society they move . . . . She was not rich . . . but she was one of the much-admired class who, in the speech of New England, are said to have 'faculty'—a gift which, among that shrewd people, commands more esteem than beauty, riches, learning or any other worldly endowment. Faculty is Yankee for savoir-faire, and the opposite virtue to shiftfulness. Faculty is the greatest virtue, and shiftlessness the greatest vice of Yankee man and woman. To her who has faculty nothing shall be impossible. She shall scrub floors, wash, wring, bake, brew, and yet her hand shall be small and white; she shall have no perceptible income, yet always be handsomely dressed; she shall not have a servant in the house—with a dairy to manage, hired men to feed, a boarder or two to care for, unheard of pickling and preserving to do—and yet you commonly see her every afternoon sitting at her shady parlor window, behind the lilacs, cool and easy, hemming muslin cap-strings or reading the last new book. She who hath faculty is never in a hurry, never behind-hand. She can always step over to distressed Mrs. Smith, whose jelly won't come—and stop to show Mrs. Jones how she makes her pickles so green—and be ready to watch with poor old Mrs. Simpkins, who is down with the rheumatism."

With the election of Mr. Taft, the establishment of postal savings banks in the United States is almost a certainty in the opinion of Postmaster General Meyer.

Empire Carriage Coat.

In all the delicate shades of gray, ecru and blue are seen carriage coats of broadcloth of a satin finish which go well with the liberty satin afternoon gowns, which they are made to cover. A wrap, which can be readily taken off or adjusted because of its loose fronts, back and arms' eyes has adjusted sleeves whose shoulder seams are concealed beneath the passementerie and lace motif applications, which in most instances match the shade of the material.

THE DREAMS AHEAD.

What should we do in this world of ours,
Were it not for the dreams ahead?
For thorns are mixed with the blooming flowers,
No matter which path we tread.

And each of us has his golden goal,
Stretching far into the years;
And ever he climbs with a hopeful soul,
With alternate smiles and tears.

To some it's a dream of high estate,
To some it's a dream of wealth,
To some it's a dream of a truce with fate
In a constant search for health.

To some it's a dream of home and wife,
To some it's a crown above;
The dreams ahead are what what make each life—
The dreams—and faith—and love!

ALMOST A RECORD BREAKER.

It is but five months since the volume by Doctors Worcester and McComb, entitled "Religion and Medicine," was put on the market, and already 22,000 copies have been disposed of. Men acquainted with the exceptional successes of popular books say that this record has only once been paralleled as respects volumes of a serious character—and that exception was Professor Drummond's "Natural Law in the Spiritual World."

BROADER THAN THE MIDDLETOWN CASE.

The formal declination of Messrs Ward and Peckham to serve as senator and representative from Middletown in the General Assembly, and the issuance of a call for another election, probably settles the present muddle so far as Middletown is concerned, but it does not go far enough. When the matter was first brought to the attention of the public it was seen that there was a fatal defect in the law, or its interpretation, which allowed such an error as the placing of a candidate's name under a wrong designation on the official ballot. It was generally believed that the case should be carried to the courts, to determine the liability for such a mistake and provide remedies to prevent a recurrence of the error. This would be of benefit to every city and town in the state, where it is evident that such errors might occur.

If Middletown settles the trouble in a way satisfactory to itself, by holding another election, no one else will be benefitted, the liability to error in the official ballot will still remain, and the difficulty is no more nearly solved than before. The Citizens' party of Middletown owes it to itself and its fellow-citizens throughout the state, to carry the matter to the supreme court for a determination of the questions in doubt, that there may be no opportunity for repetitions of the error, which might not be so easily settled as the Middletown trouble apparently has been.

THE REVIVAL OF BUSINESS.

Let us be entirely fair; the revival of business has been going on for some time. It began soon after the panic and has pretty steadily continued. The railroad business was about the hardest hit, and the largest number of idle cars was reported at the end of April. From that time on the decrease has been continuous. The third quarter of the year was far better for the Steel Corporation than either of the first two, and the third quarter ended when Bryan's prospects were at their best. There was a marked improvement in business a few days after his nomination.

We may as well admit also that there is apt to be a holding back of business near an election to see how the thing will turn out. It does not necessarily follow that business men believe the success of either candidate would check trade, but it is one of the chances which men would rather have behind than in front of them. A man is not quite sure what other people will think of the election and whether they will be cheerful or alarmed, he might as well wait a few weeks and have that uncertainty, whatever it may be worth, out of the way.

After making all these qualifications, there can be no doubt that the business of the country drew a long breath of relief when it was assured that the next President would not be the man who has prescribed depreciated currency for the relief of business depression, who wishes to govern the United States on the town meeting idea, whose hostility to large corporations and aggregated capital is notorious, who has not had much legal training or any training in or association with commercial affairs, who has recommended state ownership of railroads and has developed so many new ideas regarding the functions of government that no one is at all sure what he might or might not recommend to Congress. After all proper allowances for political and commercial vagaries have been made, there is no doubt that Bryan's defeat has removed a menace from the business of the country. The influences which will control the action of Taft we can depend upon.

FOREIGN STUDENTS IN AMERICAN COLLEGES.

Not long since a clergyman of influence speaking on the problems of city life and the need of missionary and educational work among the foreigners in large cities, made the statement that within a comparatively short time the young men who would be going up College Hill to Brown University would be largely Italians. This prediction seemed somewhat strange at the time, inasmuch as there are at present but few students of that nationality at Brown or at any of the American colleges, and the immigrants who come to this land from Italy do not appear to be of the class who would be likely to seek higher education for themselves or their sons and daughters. But if this clergyman was wrong as regards the particular nationality which he believed in a brief time would be seeking education at the college in this state, he may not have been much, if at all, in error with reference to a tendency which is becoming marked all over the country, for foreigners to matriculate at American universities as regular or special students.

A recent writer in the New York Evening Post gave some figures to show how strong is the current already in this direction and how rapidly it has increased within the past few years. He estimates that, taking into consideration all kinds of institutions for higher and special instruction, the number of foreigners who are engaged in study at these places in the United States is more than 1,200, and that it has doubled in the past three years. He declares, too, that this influx of students from other countries, and from the different nationalities represented in the citizenship of the country which have not until recently contributed to the colleges, will increase rapidly in the immediate future, as the excellence of the instruction here becomes more generally known and the advantages which accrue to the students from the broader and freer life of this country are better appreciated.

Nor is this tendency surprising, in view of both these points which he enumerates as drawing cards for the colleges of this land. There was a time of course when American colleges could not compete with those of the larger and older cities abroad, and to some extent that is still true, though it is not so in the broad sense that it formerly was. Our colleges have grown and developed, their curriculum has been widened and extended, and they furnish within their limitations as good opportunities for training as can be secured anywhere in the world. The result is that young men are finding their way to the American colleges from almost all parts of the world and comparatively few go abroad for a university training now, except for special preparation for professions or departments of professions. So from every quarter of the globe are coming to the colleges of this land students who seek here opportunities to study and at the same time enjoy the wider freedom of thought and life which makes an atmosphere which they find it delightful to breathe after the narrowness to which they are forced to submit at home.

The time may never come when the majority of the students in the colleges of this country will be foreigners or sons of foreigners, for at the same time that many of these are showing a desire to acquire higher education the same disposition is manifest at home. The increase of students of foreign nationality is accompanied by an increase also in the number of native young men, but it seems to be assured that a considerably larger proportion of young men of foreign birth will be enrolled in the college catalogues in the future than has been the case in earlier years. It is to be expected that the introduction of this element will tend toward the improvement of college life and work and the college spirit of democracy by giving to such institutions a more cosmopolitan air and a more invigorating atmosphere.

SOCIALIST DOMESTICITY.

H. G. Wells, who writes novels about life on this world a thousand years hence, and therefore feels competent to revolutionize the social and economic system of the present, has withdrawn from the Fabian Society. Despatches from England do not give fully his reasons therefor, but an extract from his statement suggests that it is because the Fabian Society is not radical enough for him. As George Bernard Shaw has not withdrawn from the society and his views of domestic life under the reign of socialism are given with considerable frankness in "Man and Superman," including the "Notebook of a Revolutionist," one is a little appalled at the thought that it does not go far enough to suit the gentlemen who writes prophetic novels.

Mr. Wells writes: "The scheme which proposes to leave a mother and child economically dependent upon a father is to me not socialism at all, but a miserable perversion of socialism." Society must take care of the mother and support the child. What all this means Mr Wells has told in some of his recent books, somewhat veiled but still intelligible. Shaw doesn't tell things much. William Morris, who was in practice a good husband and father and a capitalist, admits, without venturing into any particulars, that socialism is as hostile to the private family as it is to private property.

If society is to control all industry it must regulate a great many things which we are not much in the habit of having regulated. If it is to determine how much increase of population it desires, and what strains of inheritance it wishes to continue it will do more than rear the children after the manner of Plato's "Republic." It will regulate things which Mr Wells does not feel like discussing very minutely, but of which he has given intelligible suggestions. The socialists come out strong when they attack existing evils. When they propose remedies they are more than strong—they are stark.

Governor Hughes of New York has been mentioned as a possibility for the United States Senate in 1911, when Senator Depew's term will expire. If Root should be elected to succeed Platt next March, and Hughes succeed Depew two years later, New York would have a representation in the Senate which would be on a par with that of any other state in the Union.

Chairman Hitchcock of the Republican national committee declares that "when William H. Taft assumes his Presidential duties next March he will do so untrammelled by any entanglements, either with persons or with corporations." Mr. Taft has made no promises.

The German company, in naming its largest steamship George Washington, pays a high tribute to this country.

KING EDWARD AND HIS CLUBS.

[Marquise de Fontenoy.]

With regard to the controversy now in progress in the ranks of the Jockey Club about the question of acquiring a home of its own in London, which it does not now possess, being dependent upon the hospitality of the Turf Club, and usually holding its meetings at the town residence of one or another of its members, it may be of interest to call attention to the fact that King Edward is neither the patron nor the president of this club, but a mere ordinary member. In other clubs to which he belongs, including the Royal Yacht squadron, he figures as patron or as president. But as far as the Jockey Club is concerned he is in the ranks, just like the other royal members thereof. There is, in fact, no president of the club, the powers and duties of president, as well as the executive authority of the club, being vested in the hands of the three stewards, who are elected every year, and who constitute the most powerful body on the British turf and the supreme tribunal in English racing matters, there being no appeal from their decisions.

Of all King Edward's clubs the Jockey Club is the only one in which he has retained any intimate connection since his accession to the throne. He is never seen any more at the Marlborough, which he himself founded for his own use and for that of his friends, and during the last Cowes week he only once put in an appearance at the clubhouse of the Royal Yacht Squadron. One of the principles of club life is that all members are theoretically equal, enjoying the same rights, and as this is not altogether compatible with sovereignty, the king withdrew from most of his London clubs on succeeding to the throne. He still, however, remains the patron of the old Garrick Club in London, which he joined just 41 years ago.

ROYALTY AND THEIR PERFUMES.

The Empress of Russia spends $10,000 a year on perfumes, pastes, soaps and toilet waters, which are sent to her exclusively from the French capital. Violet is her favorite scent, but her taste in perfumes is so general that every day she vaporizes the royal apartments with essences of lilacs, jasmine, narcissus, jonquil, tube-rose and white violets. It is said that the air is so heavily impregnated with scent that the members of her suite are occasionally indisposed and have to retire from her presence. The empress's toilet water is perfumed with violets, which are gathered specially at Grasse between five and seven o'clock in the evening—the time when, according to her Majesty, their perfume is the most delicate.

The queen-mother of Spain was particularly fond of the essence of a special variety of orchid which is only found in the Philippines. But since the Spanish-American war the queen has lost her liking for this perfume, and now employs "eau d'Espagne," specially made for her in Madrid.

The Queen of Roumania, who is naturally proud of her white hair and her fresh complexion, which, in spite of her 60 years, does not betray a single wrinkle, attributes it to a marvelous toilet water, of which "Carmen Sylvia" alone knows the secret. The water is believed to be made from flowers gathered in an unknown forest by certain women sworn to secrecy, who collect the precious leaves under the watchful eye of a cordon of sentinels charged to keep away inquisitive intruders.

OUR FIRST TURBINE BATTLESHIP.

When the North Dakota went down the ways at Quincy Point, Mass., Tuesday the United States navy came into possession of its first turbine battleship. When completed the North Dakota and her sister ship, the Delaware, will be the most efficient war vessels under the Stars and Stripes, but only the North Dakota will be driven by turbine engines of the kind used in cruiser Salem, the fastest craft in the navy, and the equal of any cruiser afloat. The North Dakota can easily make 21 knots an hour, which a short time ago was considered remarkable speed for a light cruiser.

Not only the engines of the North Dakota, but the draft fans as well, are of the turbine type. Adequate draft is one of the most difficult problems with which marine engineers have to deal, for it is the vital element in securing speed, and speed is now almost important as the warship's batteries. The North Dakota will have 14 Sirocco turbine fans, each with a capacity of 24,000 cubic feet a minute. This means that 336,000 cubic feet of air are required every minute to keep up the fires under the boilers.

The new battleship carries big guns almost exclusively. She measures 510 feet on the water line, and a little over 85 feet at her greatest breadth. When completed the North Dakota will represent an outlay of more than $10,000,000.

CHEAPER FOREIGN POSTAGE.

[Boston Transcript.]

In the discussion of the widening area of two-cent postage and the threat of lessened revenues thereby it should not be forgotten that the two-cent rate means 53 cents a pound on the average weight of letters and postal cards, and this is wholly adequate compensation even for long distances. The cost of collection and distribution is not materially greater for the 10,000-mile letter than for one that goes 10 miles, while the transportation cost is small in proportion to this pound rate.

East Providence Treasurer Warned Not to Pay Appropriations.

Barbers' Union Votes to Refuse to Take or Pay for Licenses—Rescued from Fire.

Acting, as he says, in the interests of the taxpayers of East Providence, Alfred J. Kent of that town has notified Town Treasurer Fred B. Halliday not to pay out any money on the appropriations made at the town meeting last Monday. Mr. Kent's argument is that no sufficient mention was made of the purposes for which appropriations were to be made in the call for the meeting. In his letter to Mr. Halliday he says: "You are hereby notified that the pretended vote and action of the town of East Providence, R. I., at its annual town meeting, held upon the ninth day of November A. D. 1908, was invalid, illegal and void as to many of the appropriations made at that time in fact as to practically all of the various appropriations that were made, for the reason, among others, that no sufficient mention was made of the purposes for which appropriations were to be made in the call that was given for said meeting. I also further notify you not to pay out any of the town's money on account of said appropriations, not only because such appropriations were not specially mentioned in the warrant, or even in a general way as a matter to be considered therein, but also because there is no legal authority on the part of the town to use or employ the town's money for several of said purposes. I prefer not to undertake injunction proceedings and prefer to hold the treasurer and his sureties liable upon his bond for any illegal payment of the town's moneys, as a more direct and satisfactory proceeding. I give you this notice in behalf of the taxpayers of East Providence, who are interested in the lawful appropriation and payment of the moneys of said town."

The Journeyman Barbers' Union at a meeting held in Providence at which more than two thirds of the members were present, voted unanimously to refuse to take out or pay for any licenses December 15 if the so-called Angelo Armeno case, which it is claimed has been in litigation for the past three years, has not been settled by the State Board of Examiners of Barbers before that time. On the other hand, the Board of Examiners protests that it has nothing to do with it, the case being up to the attorney general and the supreme court. Jeremiah J. Manning, the Providence member of the board, admitted yesterday that the complaint of the journeyman barbers is well founded, and that the board has tried all it could to bring the matter to a head, but has been unable to do so. The trouble, as explained by L. E. Hersey, Secretary of the Barbers' Union, is over the right of Angelo Armeno, who has a barber shop at 21 Dorrance street, to do business without a license. Mr. Manning corroborated Mr. Hersey in the statement that the license of Mr. Armeno was revoked for cause three years ago, and that he has continued to do business without it, notwithstanding the protests of the Board of Examiners and of the Barbers' Union. Mr. Hersey said that 15 months ago a committee was appointed by the union to see Governor Higgins about the matter, and that as a result the board gave two hearings and then allowed the matter to drop again. It appears, however, that Armeno brought suit in the supreme court to test the legality of the state law authorizing the Board of Examiners to grant and revoke licenses, and this case is still pending. Mr. Manning said yesterday that the board will see the attorney general again and endeavor to settle the matter before the end of the year.

Six persons narrowly escaped with their lives when fire was discovered this morning shortly after midnight in Charles V. Gross's shoe and variety store, Cranston. Scantily clad, Mr. Gross, who lives over the store; his wife, father, mother, sister and brother-in-law made their way out of the building just a moment before the flames forced their way into the upper tenement. Before the blaze was extinguished the building was practically destroyed, the estimated damage being $2,500. Paul Broderick, who has a drug store near by, first noticed the flames in the Gross store, and George Studley, who was with him, knowing that the owner and his relatives were asleep on the second floor, immediately sent a volley of stones crashing through the second-story windows. Aroused by this emphatic summons, members of the family hurried to the windows and were quickly apprised of the state of affairs. They were warned to hasten, as already the blaze threatened to envelop the whole building at any moment. Catching up whatever articles of clothing were within reach, all six rushed out uninjured. A few weeks ago Mr. Gross's shoe store was burned out and what remained of the stock he transferred to the building burned last night. There he already had a variety store and this later blaze destroys not only the variety store but what was saved from the former fire as well.

The jurisdiction of the Providence station of the United States bureau of animal industry has been extended to cover the whole of Rhode Island and Bristol county, Mass., in the matter of inspecting markets, selling fats for edible purposes. The Department of Agriculture has decided to enlarge the scope of its inspection of markets in this particular, and for this purpose has divided the work in New England between four of the stations. Dr. B. M. Smith, inspector-in-charge, has been allowed two more inspectors, and expects a third. Inspector J. H. Morrison has been transferred from Boston to this station and assigned to three establishments in Fall River which have recently come under inspection. Inspector John T. Carlson has been transferred here from South Omaha, Neb., and has duties assigned him in Providence. An additional sausage factory in Providence has come under federal inspection, being the twenty-eighth in charge of the Providence station.

At the wedding of Governor Higgins and Miss Ellen F. Maguire, which will take place next Tuesday in St. Joseph's Church, Pawtucket, the attendants will be Miss Mary Grace Maguire, sister of the bride-elect, as maid of honor; Mr. Thomas D Higgins, the brother of the governor, as best man, and the ushers will be Dr. Peter J. Heffern, Dr. Frank P. Gormley, Colonel Louis Murphy and Mr. John J. Conaty. No invitations have been issued to the church, and only relatives and intimate friends have been invited to the breakfast, which will follow at the home of the bride's parents on Spring street, Pawtucket.

Next Monday the fourth bridge over the Seekonk river between India Point and Blackstone Park will be in service this being the one connecting the tunnel through the East Side hill and the tracks in East Providence leading to Warren, Bristol, Fall River, Worcester and Boston. The difference in the types of bridges over the river is marked. The railway bridge at India Point, built a few years ago, is a substantial structure and has a swinging draw. Washington bridge is a short distance up stream and has a look of weakness when compared to the other structures over the Seekonk. It was built about 25 years ago and undoubtedly will not be duplicated when a new highway bridge is needed. The tunnel bridge has a draw which is lifted vertically and is of plate girder construction. This is regarded as the best type of bridge for navigable waters like the Seekonk. Red bridge is one of the best truss bridges in New England and has enough metal to carry a railway train. This series of bridges proves that Providence is an important commercial and industrial centre and that a city which has two railway bridges over one river is not retrograding.

The mills of the Rodman Manufacturing Company of Lafayette and Shady Lea in North Kingstown went on full time Monday, after having been on short time of four days a week for nine months. The mill at Lafayette was closed for about four weeks prior to election, while new boilers were put in, and resumption of full time is hailed with delight not only by the many employes but by the townspeople generally. There is also an increase in the number of employes in nearly all departments, especially in the weaving rooms. About 200 employes are affected by the change to full time. The company manufactures woolen goods.

Closely following the break and theft of furs to the value of $7,000 Sunday night last, thieves again tried to force an entrance to the fur store of Kaps and Reinacher, 135 Mathewson street, last night. The clanging of the burglar alarm going over the front door of the store when a window opening into the court yard in the rear was raised, and the rush of policemen and citizens to the place, alone prevented another haul of costly goods.

REPUBLICAN MAJORITIES.

[Boston Transcript.]

Taft's popular plurality over Bryan will approximate 1,200,444 votes, which is 50 per cent greater than McKinley's over Bryan in 1900, making this the severest of Bryan's three defeats. Roosevelt's plurality over Parker, however, reached two and a half millions, or slightly double the popular plurality this time. The difference came in the West. Only three States gave Taft a greater plurality than they did Roosevelt four years ago, and these were Connecticut, Massachusetts and New York. Throughout the West a considerable return to normal party divisions was manifest. Kansas, for example, gives Taft 35,000 plurality where it gave Roosevelt 126,000. Iowa gives him a 50,000 plurality, while it gave Roosevelt one three times as great. Nevertheless, Taft's lead, both in popular vote and the electoral college, will stand as among the largest ever attained in American presidential elections.

HERBERT DUDLEY HALE DEAD.

Son of Rev. Edward Everett Hale Was Prominent Architect.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—Herbert D. Hale, son of Rev. Edward Everett Hale, and one of the best known architects of this city, is dead at his home in East Fifty-fifth street. He died last night after a long illness, from a nervous disorder. He was 42 years of age. Mr. Hale was born in Boston. He entered Harvard in 1884, and after graduating went to Paris and took the regular course at the Beaux Arts. After his return to this country he married Miss Margaret Marquand. Five children survive.

Mr. Hale designed the Engineers' building and other notable structures in this city. In competition with the leading architects his design for the new post office building in New Orleans was accepted. He was a member of the Players' Club and the University Club of Boston.

IN POOR HEALTH THREE YEARS.

Rev. Edward Everett Hale Receives News of His Son's Death.

BOSTON, Nov. 11—The death of his son, Herbert Dudley Hale, was communicated to Rev. Edward Everett Hale at his home in Roxbury today, and the venerable divine received the news with grief, but with resignation.

Mr. Hale had an office in this city, but spent most of his time in New York. He had been in poor health for nearly three years, and sought relief by a trip abroad. During the past few months he failed gradually, so that the announcement of his death occasioned no surprise. It is expected that the body will be brought here for burial.

GRANGE TO VISIT ROOSEVELT.

Twenty-Eight States Represented at National Meeting in Washington.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11—Representatives of 28 states are here to attend the meeting of the National Grange, Patrons of Husbandry, which began its sessions today. Former Governor Bachelder of New Hampshire, master of the Grange, presides over the meetings, which will be held daily throughout this week and next. President Roosevelt will receive the Grange in a body at the White House tomorrow.

REAR ADMIRAL JAMES MILLER.

Governor of Naval Home in Philadelphia Dies There.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 11—Rear Admiral James M. Miller, governor of the United States Naval Home in this city, died at that institution today, after a brief illness. Rear Admiral Miller was 61 years old, and was appointed to the navy from Missouri in 1863. He commanded cruiser Columbia, later coming to the Philadelphia navy yard, where he commanded receiving ship Lancaster. He had been in charge of the Naval Home for the last year and a half.

MILITARY BANDS.

May Play Outside Post When No Local Organization Competes for Employment.

[The "Dominant."]

A local decision by the War Department fixing the status of all military bands, is a slap at the Musicians' Union and says in substance that military bands are professional musicians and bands whose members have other occupation are inferior. Army bands and members thereof can play outside the military posts when satisfactory assurances are given that there are no local organizations or musicians who desire to compete for the employment. However, it is held that a musician, to be able to compete, must have no other occupations.

This question has come up in various forms several times and caused ill feeling on the part of union men when the band has appeared for pay. By the decision of the War Department the question is reopened, and is likely to cause many complications if United States army bands are employed to appear in parades, concerts, etc. The decision of the War Department, condensed, is as follows:

"It has been decided that army bands and members thereof can play outside the military posts when satisfactory assurances are given the commanding officer by the employers that there are no local organizations or musicians who desire to compete for the employment. If they have not the requisite ability, it is evident that they cannot compete as army bandsmen are excellent musicians and devote there entire time to music."

The Musicians Union is disregarded and civilian musicians must as individuals or as bands or orchestra show that they have the necessary organizations and ability and that they are musicians in the proper sense of the word; that is, must be continuously employed as such and not follow this profession as a secondary occupation. It is evident under this decision that a carpenter, mail carrier, etc., cannot claim to be a musician within the meaning of the act of Congress.

"A FASCINATING WIDOW'S" ENTANGLEMENTS.

A small audience witnessed an excellent performance of the farce comedy, "A Fascinating Widow," at the Opera House Tuesday evening. It was a story of misunderstandings and complications in which a fascinating widow involves a number of persons, who become more and more entangled as the play proceeds, the situations being satisfactorily cleared at the end. The company was a good one. Gertrude [illegible] was capital as Mrs. Raymond, [illegible] enough to be a widow at 20; [illegible] had the leading male [illegible] Bascom, who became [illegible] involved in the [illegible] fascinations, and shared the [illegible] Miss Hendhill. The others [illegible] Vernon MacDonald, F. D. [illegible] George De Carleton, Frank Gar[illegible] Phelan, Georgine Brandon, [illegible] Wilkes and Helen Mansfield [illegible] the various characters [illegible].

A CHRISTMAS HYMN BY A NEWPORT ORGANIST.

A [illegible] Hymn has just come [illegible] composed by Mr. [illegible] of Trinity Church. Its [illegible] and the style [illegible] harmony is legitimate [illegible] being somewhat the [illegible] of the old English writ[illegible] much more dignified [illegible] to church worship than [illegible] such compositions.

"SEA SERPENT" OFF PRICES NECK.

[illegible] A. Easterbrooks hauled his [illegible] Prices Neck today, there was [illegible] in the fish line. The [illegible] however, was explained shortly after noon, for a real "sea serpent" was seen off the cove and Surfmen Casey and Whaley went after it, though could give them points on how to go through the water, and they were left. They say the "serpent" was about 20 feet long and 5 broad and had the undulating movement, which with its white color, has so often deceived spectators into thinking it was much longer.

TUNNEL MAY RUN UNDER CITY.

Engineers at Work on Plans for Fall River That Concern Rapid Transit to New York.

[Fall River Herald.]

An engineer connected with the engineering department of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company has been engaged in Fall River for several days in studying plans of the centre of the city and securing data to be used in working out plans for a railroad tunnel under the city. The company's engineers have been working out this idea now for over a year. It was a natural sequence of the assured success of the company's tunnel between East Providence and the union station in Providence.

Drafts have been made of several different plans for going through the city and improving the facilities for transporting freight by means of a tunnel. All made so far have been discarded for one cause or another and now a new plan is being worked out. The details are not yet sufficiently developed for anything definite to be given out. In fact, no details of any of the plans proposed were made public, and no publicity has been given to the fact that the tunnel proposition was being studied. Until the company's general officials have decided upon some definite plan no proposition for constructing a tunnel will be presented either to the local authorities, or to the State Board of Railroad commissioners.

It is understood that the plan now in process of making provides for an opening of the tunnel at the level of the main line at or near Diman street, just west of Broadway. A gradual sweep to the south will be followed, cutting under a portion of the South park, crossing to the east at about Park street, and then gradually sweeping toward the north, crossing under Plymouth avenue and land at the Richard Borden Manufacturing Company to the Watuppa freight yard, where the tunnel extension will join the New Bedford branch.

This, it is understood, is the general route. There will be numerous openings from the tunnel to the upper surface, and probably at least one station, if the plan is adopted.

The idea of travelling under the city was taken up to meet more than the local needs. By means of the Providence tunnel through train services are to be established from New York to Fall River and Newport. With a tunnel under Fall River the through service could be extended to New Bedford and the Cape. This improvement in through service relates primarily to passenger traffic, but the eventual improvement of freight service is of even more importance. With a tunnel freight can be delivered at the Watuppa station without the long extra haul to New Bedford. The distance to be hauled between New York and New Bedford would also be very much shortened.

If only the local freight moving proposition were to be considered it is probable that a loop to the south would be established in accordance with the general idea that has been repeatedly advanced. There are difficulties (and objects in the way of such a loop, but they could all be overcome. If the construction of a tunnel proves to be feasible, and it is decided to do it, the surface loop project will be abandoned, so far as it relates to a loop from the main line to the New Bedford branch and Watuppa station. The smaller loop to afford freight accommodation for the Stevens mills, Fall River bleachery, Estes mills and other establishments in the extreme southeastern section will probably be put through.

The chief difficulty in the way of constructing and using a tunnel is the difference in grade. There is a difference of over 130 feet between the elevation of the main line of the railroad and that of the New Bedford branch. In the short distance to be covered the grade would be heavy and somewhat difficult, even with a sweep out of the straight line. In Providence no serious difficulty in grade was experienced, the elevation at the terminals not differing greatly. With electric motive power the difficulty in grade here can be overcome.

LOCAL BRIEFS.

—Dr. Hughes of Providence was a visitor here today.

—Mr. F. H. Wiswell of the Perry House has returned from New York.

—Steamer Plymouth is to take the place of steamer Commonwealth on the Fall River line Saturday.

—The dredger which has been at work in the lower harbor has gone to Providence, to be hauled out for repairs.

—C. B. Anderson's catboat Marion is out at the shipyard for an overhauling, preparatory to the winter fishing.

—A sailor from the Chester and a soldier from Fort Adams were each fined $5 and costs today for malicious mischief.

—William Loftus has sold for Nicholas Faggella and wife the property at 11 Thames street to Joseph Stroer and Christina Stroer.

—Mr. John Gilpin, who celebrated his sixtieth birthday today, was in receipt of the joint congratulations of his associates on the Daily News.

—During the fog Tuesday night a tug came near running aground at Gooseberry Island. The life saving crew warned the captain and there was no occasion for a rescue.

—Sloop yacht Mariette, which has been lying in the harbor for some weeks, pulled into Perry Mill wharf this noon, where she will lie until the dredging between Sullivan's and Bowen's wharves has been done.

—The different organizations connected with Emmanuel Church are to unite in the farewell reception to Rev. Oscar F. Moore, Jr., and Mrs. Moore Thursday evening. It is to be an entirely informal affair, for the members of the parish.

—Mr. and Mrs. Charles D. Stark, Jr., (Miss Lillian L. Carry), have arrived at their home at Johnsville, Cal., after an extended wedding trip. They found flowers blooming in the mountains, where a year ago at this time there were many feet of snow covering the ground.

—A still was sounded at 6:30 o'clock Tuesday evening for a fire about the furnace in the home of John T. Dolans on Calvert street, where damage to the extent of about $50 was done before the firemen extinguished it. The loss was covered by insurance through the agency of H. Bull, Jr.

—The Newport Coal Company has pulled down one of the old buildings on Langley's wharf and will tear down three or four more, to make room for the new sheds which it is to put up. The building formerly occupied by Joshua B. Bachelier is to be raised and used as a wood shop. The big oak timbers and the boards, over two feet wide, in the old structure shows that it was one of the old-

THE QUEEN OF ITALY.

Helene, a Montenegrin, and a Great Devotee to Many Outdoor Sports.

Queen Alexandra as a devotee of sports is forced to share honors with Queen Helene of Italy, for she is a Montenegrin, and the women from Montenegro are daring. As a child her time was divided between the fields and the mountains, and it is hard to say which she enjoyed the more.

When the king came to court her she said to him mischievously: "I am so glad you came; I want to teach an Italian what mountain-climbing means." Their first day's climb was not difficult, but her gallant cavalier confessed it was a fairly good ascent for a woman. At the end of the third expedition the king was growing desperate. But when she showed him the side of a mountain as straight as a wall, he said "Never." But she would not yield, and seeing that her gallant young escort could not be forced to go, she said: "Never mind. You wait here and I shall go alone!"

The King became pale at the thought of making the venture, and still he did not see how she could go alone, even without a guide. She went; he waited for her below, until she returned that evening with rosy cheeks, but no worse for the climb. When his family opposed the marriage as being too bourgeoise, he recalled her courage at mountaineering, and realized that this was a little plebeian for a woman who would some day share a throne. But shortly after she beat him at tennis, and then he explained to his parents: "This Montenegrin is the woman for me; she is as skilful in the fields as in climbing mountain heights."

When the queen came to Rome she consoled herself for the mountaineering she lost by playing tennis. The first gift the king gave her was a tennis court, and when the king was not busy with affairs of state they were seen playing tennis together, and she was as proud of her stroke as of climbing mountains.

The king is fond of hunting and has beautiful hunting estates. She is equally fond of this sport, and they both go on long hunting trips together. Here is the day on which some trophies do not fall to her gun, for it is hard to find a woman more skilful with a shotgun or rifle. She is a beautiful horsewoman, and before her children were a year old she had them ride a pony. They were strapped in a basket so they could not fall.

Before automobiling became so popular Queen Helene was enthusiastic about bicycling, a pastime which Queen Margherita, her mother-in-law, before she became a widow, often enjoyed with her. Queen Margherita presented to Queen Helene shortly after her marriage a bicycle fitted with gold and silver, and together the two royal women used to cycle in the park daily.

It was Queen Margherita who has made her son and daughter-in-law enthusiastic automobilists. At first they were indifferent to the sport, but the queen mother insisted on their making tours in her car, and now they have several handsome machines. Not long ago they made an excursion of 225 miles in their car, completing the distance in 14 hours. They started at four o'clock in the morning, dined in the open field at Oneglia, and reached their destination that evening, confident it was the most unconventional, most pleasant short journey they had ever had.

Queen Margherita has had many daring and exciting adventures. She admits that her happiest days are spent touring. At first she was prejudiced against motor cars and would not be persuaded to ride in one, as she considered them both ugly and dangerous. One day, however, she permitted a friend to persuade her to take a spin. Just as they were ready to speed down hill the brake refused to work, and the queen was in a dreadful state of fright. But it cured her fear, and from that day she became wildly enthusiastic about machines.

A SHARK WEIGHING 11,000 POUNDS.

Some large sharks have been caught on the Pacific coast, but one secured in San Pedro, Southern California, is declared to be the largest creature of its kind ever captured in the world. When first drawn out of the water this sea monster weighed 11,000 pounds. It measured from tip to tip just 32 feet, and the circumference of the body just forward of the huge dorsal fin was 15 feet. Across the mouth—horizontally—when opened it was 2½ feet, while from the tip of the snout to the point of the lower jaw it was 5½ feet. This shark became entangled in the net of two Italian fishermen, which finally resulted in its capture.

THE ROUTE PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT WILL TAKE.

Sir Harry Johnston, a well known author and English administrator in South Africa, has given a description of the route which President Roosevelt will take on his African hunting trip in an address before the National Geographic Society. The speaker, who has been entertained by the President and discussed with him the hunt, is regarded as one of the greatest living authorities on Central African exploration.

The lecturer disclaimed any authority to speak for the President as to where his wanderings would lead, but showed an inland route to the hunting grounds from Mombasa that the President would certainly have to follow if he is to get the richest experiences. With the aid of views Sir Harry described scenes at the old Portuguese fort at Mombasa and told of the Somali warriors and maidens in quaint costumes. The trail leads inward through a rough grass country with ant hills resembling steeples or telegraph poles.

Other pictures showed the Masai and Galla tribe further inland, and it was explained that one part of this bloodthirsty race had completely wiped out its less warlike members. Other views were given of the bamboo forests, gigantic grasses and tangled rubber forests.

DUTEE J. PEARCE.

Death in Mansfield of a Son and Namesake of a Prominent Newport Citizen.

Mr. Dutee Jerauld Pearce, whose death at Mansfield, Mass., in his seventy-sixth year, is reported, was a native of this city and a son of Dutee J. Pearce, one of the most prominent citizens of Newport in the early part of the last century. The elder Dutee J. Pearce was at various times attorney general of the state, United States district attorney, Presidential elector, and from 1825 to 1837 a representative from Rhode Island in Congress. The younger Mr. Pearce lived in Newport a number of years, but spent the latter part of his life in Massachusetts, Foxboro and Mansfield, being occupied in farming.

He leaves a married daughter. His mother was sister of the late Elliott Boys, who died several years ago, in his ninety-fifth year. The body will be brought to Newport for interment in the Pearce family plot in the Duck Factory Cemetery on Warner street.

Y. M. C. A. CORNER-STONE LAYING.

It is proposed to lay the corner-stone of the new Young Men's Christian Association building next week, probably Wednesday or Thursday. Since it is planned to have but one speaker at the ceremony, and he had not yet replied as to his convenience, it is not possible to announce the day definitely. At noon the Woman's Auxiliary will serve a lunch for business men in the gymnasium, at which Mr. George A. Warburton of New York will be the principal speaker. The public exercises will be held in the open at 2:30, at which time an address will be made and the stone will be laid by Mr. Alfred G. Vanderbilt, the donor of the building.

PICTURE PUZZLES A MANIA.

Craze a Source of Profit to Some Wage-Earning Women.

Many Wealthy Devotees of the Pastime Make Their Own Games.

"You have my 'Rebecca at the Well' also the Gibson Girl and the Japanese print," wrote a lady, "and I am returning you the two Boston puzzles and the 'Holy Family' that belongs to your friend in Tuxedo. They're all very good. Will you send mine back by the messenger?"

This letter is typical of many others, for nowadays the picture or jig saw puzzle is borrowed just as books are, and there has recently come into existence another point of resemblance between the two. In a bank building on upper Fifth avenue, New York, a woman has opened a circulating library where puzzles may be had on payment of a small fee. In that way it is possible to get hold of as many new puzzles as the most insatiable puzzle fiend might desire without the necessity of buying them outright. Until this woman opened her little shop there was only the possibility of borrowing from friends. The library is an indication of the spread of the mania in the last two years.

There is probably not a country house between New York and Bar Harbor that has not its bridge tables spread in the drawing rooms not for bridge, but for the playing of these puzzle games. There are trays manufactured especially to hold the pieces. They are flat wood boards with a railing about an inch high about their four sides.

Their great merit is the protection they afford against the loss of the separate pieces. That is of the utmost importance, for a lifelong friendship has been known to snap under the heinous crime of returning a puzzle with one piece missing. When it is understood that some of these puzzles contain as many as 1,200 separate pieces it may be seen how easy it is to lose one.

In order to make it possible to spend a little more money on the game there are boards covered with damask or brocade like the fancy bridge tables. In some houses the trays for the puzzles are covered with the same silks that decorate the tops of the bridge tables. One of the most difficult things about these puzzles has been to make them cost money. Their materials are so cheap and their manufacture so simple that it is a sorrow to the shopkeepers that they cannot make them costly. So far the maximum price is $15. The price always depends on the number of pieces in the puzzle.

The pictures which are cut up may be bought for little, the thin boards on which they are pasted cost a few cents only and the jigsaw which serves to make hundreds of them is not an expensive investment in itself. The most skilful players of the game are no longer content to buy puzzles. They find their principal pleasure in making their own.

One of the most successful amateurs in this field is a Westchester millionaire whose health has not been good for the last year. He has presented his friends with many of these puzzles sawed and finished by his own hands.

Another successful amateur manufacturer is a physician who had for a long time been in poor health and found nothing to afford him the same diversion as the use of the jigsaw. He is a man of too much taste to be satisfied with the ordinary colored pictures that suit the average manufacturer and he uses photographs of paintings from the galleries of Europe. As he makes the pictures from brown photographs they are very difficult to put together, the difference between the varied shades being slight.

His friends prize very much the puzzle he gives them as they are not only more artistic than the ordinary puzzles, but even more costly.

Equally difficult to do because they are so much the same in color are the puzzles made of white and black drawings. They are used altogether by a New York woman who two years ago lost suddenly one of the members of her family. It was thought for a while that she would go into a state of melancholy, but she received from a friend one of the picture puzzles just as they had begun to grow popular. They absorbed her thoughts until she decided it would be still more interesting to manufacture them herself. During the last summer at Newport she made more than 100, which she gave to friends and sent to hospitals, orphan asylums and other charitable retreats for children.

All the expert amateur manufacturers of the puzzles soon take one line of picture as their specialty and that serves as a species of trade mark. One woman does only Japanese prints.

They find that the most important detail in the making of the puzzles is to put the pictures smoothly on the board and for this the ordinary photograph paste is considered the best. The picture must be laid without the faintest suggestion of a wrinkle.

After it has dried on the wood and the jigsaw has cut it into pieces the rough edges must be carefully smoothed with sandpaper until there is little difference between the surface of the picture and the edges of the separate pieces in point of smoothness.

The outside edges are straight as they are cut in the first instance at the [illegible] mill. The oval puzzle is not yet in much demand, since it is very difficult to put together. The straight edges of the pieces of the rectangular puzzle serve as a guide. The first thing that the average puzzle fiend does is to find the outside edges of the picture, which he is of course able to find by the straight edge.

Another trick of the expert puzzle [illegible] is to put together separate [illegible] that form a part of the picture. Then [illegible] combines the parts. This method has been found much easier [illegible] than attempting to begin at once on the whole picture.

[illegible] the small outlay of capital necessary and the essential [illegible] of the work to feminine [illegible] [illegible] many women who are [illegible] to take up the manufacture of the picture puzzles. The most successful of the women is [illegible]. With the assistance of two [illegible] is said to have earned $25 a week for years.

One New York woman supplies all the puzzles sold by a stationer on Fifth [illegible] and is thus spared the expense of advertising and delivering [illegible] although she does not of course get all the profits she would if she [illegible] them herself.

[illegible] Women's Exchange [illegible] [illegible] pictures sold [illegible]

[illegible] on the West Side, New York, [illegible] of a woman who is [illegible] for the last eight months a profit of [illegible] a month. Her puzzles, which are very well known to the fiends, are [illegible] for the expert, and [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] a puzzle fiend worthy of the [illegible] who does not know the [illegible]

LABORITES AGAIN IN POWER.

Australian House Defeats Premier Deakin on the Division.

MELBOURNE, Australia, Nov. 11.—Mr. Fisher, one of the Radical Labor leaders of Australia, will form the new Australian cabinet. The house defeated the premier, Alfred Deakin, on the division. The Laborites withdrew their support because the government has not pushed labor measures radical enough to suit them.

This will be the second time the Labor party has been in power in the Australian federal parliament. J. C. Watson, another of the labor leaders, was premier for a short time in 1904.

DORANDO TO RACE HAYES.

Italian Runner on Way to America, Training and Confident.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—Dorando, the Italian runner who made such a sensational finish in the Marathon race held here last summer, will leave Southampton for New York today, on board steamer Kronprinzessin Cecilie. He is accompanied by his brother, Ulpino, who is a waiter in a London restaurant. Dorando will run a race in America with John J. Hayes, the winner of the Marathon. He is in training and confident, and will continue his training on board the steamer.

DUE TO GROWING COMPETITION.

Refined Sugar Reductions in No Sense Renewal of Old Fight.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—Price reductions in refined sugar caused rumors to circulate in the trade today of a renewal of the old fight between the American Sugar Refining Company and Arbuckle Brothers. These reports have been based on the scaling down of the margin between raw and refined sugar which has been in progress of late. The normal margin between raw sugar and refined is about 90 cents a hundred pounds. The gradual reduction which has been in progress has brought the difference down to 73 cents. This amount, according to trade estimates, is little more than the cost of refining, and cuts down usual profits by two-thirds.

It was declared in circles supposedly well informed, however, that the action of the two concerns in reducing prices was due to growing competition for business, and it was in no sense a bitter war, such as was waged before. It was also said that the agreement reached some years ago between the late President Havemeyer and Arbuckle Brothers has terminated, and the latter declined to renew it. This understanding was reached about four years ago and resulted in closing the breach between the two concerns, and until a month ago they had been acting in harmony.

(Continued from column 2:) culiarities of every maker of the toys. They can tell you just which woman makes the most difficult, which manages to saw out the largest number of separate pieces, which uses the prettiest combinations of color and which charges the cheapest prices.

The demand for the puzzles is too great to be supplied by the amateur workers alone, and the toy factories have turned them out in large numbers. One of the fashionable hotels near the city has used a puzzle to advertise its advantages.

A young woman who had made money by conducting a hotel on the plan of a country house recently made an addition to it, and in order to make this known to her patrons she sent them and the other possible guests a picture puzzle which formed a view of the hotel as it is at present. While it was not especially difficult to put together, the guests who worked it out are not likely to forget the name or appearance of the hotel.

In spite of the essentially unintellectual character of the puzzle pictures they have been known to make victims of intelligent people, and there are some who have found it enough pleasure to work out these things to give up bridge in their favor. Yet nobody believes that it will ever prove a substitute for the game or even rival it in popularity.

The picture puzzles have found their greatest popularity from the fact that they can be set at any moment and returned to. The more elaborate kind with many pieces may supply entertainment for the empty minutes of a whole week. Enthusiastic players of course will not leave the table until the pieces are fitted together, even if it keeps them at work all night. Less zealous players, however, are willing to come and go.

It was this quality of the picture puzzles that made them successful as a summer diversion. In winter, when there is less idle time and one sits down to a game of bridge that is to be finished then and there, the time for the puzzles will not be so abundant and they will have less chance than ever to rival bridge.

FOR NEW WIRELESS STATION.

Washington Monument, on Account of Its Height, Suggested for This Purpose.

Invitations for bids will shortly be issued by the bureau of equipment of the Navy Department for a long distance wireless station in or near Washington, with which it is hoped to get in touch with vessels 3,000 miles away. The same advertisement will also ask for proposals on ship wireless equipment, with a radius of 1,000 miles. The proposed new station will be a high powered one, and it is planned to have a wireless mast of at least 350 or 400 feet in height. Further details will accompany the circular invitation to be sent out by the bureau.

This is an outgrowth of the proposal of Lieutenant Commander Cleland Davis that the Washington Monument be utilized as a wireless station on the same plan as the Eiffel Tower in Paris. While it is understood that this plan met with the approval of President Roosevelt, it was not put into effect, as it was believed that the proper procedure would be that of asking Congress for permission to use the memorial shaft for this material purpose, which, it is explained, would in no way mar the beauty of the monument or the surrounding park.

It is said by naval officers that it is not improbable that Secretary Metcalf will make such a recommendation to Congress, as the Washington Monument is considered ideal as a wireless station, being more than 500 feet in height. If permission is granted the operating room would be placed in the basement, only the "tuning" wires being at the top of the monument.

BRYAN'S THIRTEENTH DEFEAT.

[illegible] Returns of Presidential Election at His Lincoln Home in Year 1948.

[New York Evening Sun.]

[illegible] Neb., Nov. 5, 1948.—The venerable William Jennings [illegible], the Democratic candidate for [illegible] the Presidency, received the election [illegible] according to his time-honored [illegible] the sun parlor of his palace [illegible] in this city. He came [illegible] at five o'clock in the [illegible] and under the stimulating [illegible] Robin salts was able to re[illegible] with his friends and family until [illegible] when all doubt of an over[illegible] Republican victory was re[illegible] the news that Georgia had [illegible] his opponent a plurality of 150,-[illegible] The peerless leader took his [illegible] defeat with his customary [illegible], and when he was con[illegible] that all chance of his election [illegible] sent one of his great[illegible] to bring him from his desk [illegible] the regulated forms which he [illegible] his congratulatory message [illegible] the Republican candidate every [illegible] years. Scribbling the name and [illegible] of the President-elect on the [illegible] handed the paper to the wire[illegible] operator, and in a few minutes the [illegible] was sent with these familiar words:

"[illegible] people have decided. I bow to [illegible] will. Accept my congratulations [illegible] best wishes for a successful ad[illegible]ministration.

"William Jennings Bryan."

Only once in all the years he has been running has Mr. Bryan failed to comply promptly with the usual court[illegible] between candidates by sending such a congratulatory message. It was [illegible] by the old men present that [illegible] was in 1908, and the explanation given at the time was that he had previously written it so often that he [illegible] tired to do it again. As there [illegible] some adverse criticism of his lack of sporting blood, he determined not to be caught in such neglect again, and [illegible] a large number of the printed forms, which he has used ever since.

The scene in the Bryan sun parlor was a familiar one. At five o'clock, when the first returns were due, the family gathered, and when the venerable candidate came into the room leaning on the arm of his attendant, he was greeted with cheers by a large company composed of his children, grandchildren, great-grandchildren and a few of his oldest friends. Everybody was confident of victory, and replying to their congratulations on his undoubted sucess, he expressed his belief that the returns would show that he had over 100 votes in the electoral college. He was then led to a chair and sat down, all smiles, to hear the news.

In a few minutes the wireless instrument began to tick and William J. Bryan fourth, read the first returns, showing that his great-grandfather had carried his home election district by a plurality of 312 votes. The enthusiasm was tremendous. Mr. Bryan at once got out a paper and pencil and, computing the returns for the whole country on the basis of this district, found that he had carried every state in the Union by a tremendous plurality. He at once issued a formal statement announcing that he had won.

"This glorious victory is the people's, not mine," he said. "The reforms which I have advocated for over half a century will now become facts. At the next session of Congress laws will be passed providing for the:

"Free coinage of silver at a ratio of [illegible].

"Government ownership of railroads.

"Free trade.

"The freedom of the Philippines, Porto Rico, Cuba, Hawaii, Alaska and Nantucket Island.

"State guarantee of bank deposits.

"Stations for the free distribution of gasolene to automobilists.

"Federal guarantee of butchers, grocers and tailers' bills.

"A national prohibition of the sale of intoxicating liquors.

"Home rule and unrestricted Sunday opening.

"Tariff for revenue only.

"Government supervision of railroads.

"Statehood for the Philippines, Cuba, Porto Rico, Hawaii and Nantucket.

"The continuation of the gold standard of coinage.

"And many other reforms too numerous to mention."

This important announcement was hardly on the air when it was followed by another to the Venerbale, the Hon. "Fingy" Conners, the chairman of the National Democratic Committee, who has managed Mr. Bryan's campaigns for so many years.

"At last we have won. Accept my congratulations and thanks for the magnificent work you have done for the country.

"William Jennings Bryan."

The transmission of these messages delayed for a time the receiving of figures. When they had been sent reports began to come rushing in from different parts of the country. The announcement that New York city had given the Republican ticket a plurality of over 200,000 was the first blow that [illegible] but Mr. Bryan came up smiling and discredited it absolutely. He at once sent a message to Herman Ridder, the Tammany leader, asking for facts. The reply came speedily: "Germans distrusted your attitude on beer. Lost all. Convinced will never see that [illegible]."

The news was disheartening, but it in no way wrecked the hopes of the candidate.

"I had fully expected New York city to go against me," he said. "There has long existed there a conspiracy against me between the laboring men, the business men and the voters generally. Mr. Ridder has been making a gallant effort for 40 years now to get back that $57,000, and I am sure that this time he will. When the up-state returns come in there will be a difference."

William Jennings Bryan, fourth, interrupted to read a despatch to the effect that New York State above the Bronx had given the Republicans a plurality of 577,660 votes.

Mr. Bryan had to ask that the message be shouted in his ear trumpet and when he had heard it he was not [illegible].

CANAL PLANNED FOR GULF SHIPPING.

The project of cutting the peninsula of Florida by a ship canal connecting the Atlantic Ocean and the Gulf of Mexico was the leading question [illegible] the Convention of the [illegible] Waterway Association at [illegible], Ga. Senator-elect [illegible] of Florida outlined this plan [illegible] in a speech in which [illegible] A ship canal across the [illegible] of Florida would shorten [illegible] the route from the Atlantic Ocean into the Gulf of Mexico [illegible] to the Gulf ports of the [illegible] and avoid the dangerous [illegible] of the Gulf stream through the Straits of Florida. By this canal [illegible] of this northern continent [illegible] more than 1,000 [illegible] to the Central American [illegible] Mr. Fletcher said that for [illegible] a straight line [illegible] narrowest part of the peninsula [illegible] be selected passing through a number of large lakes and using [illegible] portions of rivers. He estimated that the canal could be dug for $30,-[illegible].

SHEFFIELD'S PLURALITY 128.

State Returning Board Begins the Providence Count.

Total Vote of Twenty Districts Gave Republican Candidate 6,327 Against Granger's 4,328.

The State Returning Board yesterday completed the counting of the ballots cast in this city and the other districts outside of Providence in the recent election, and at the end of the day William P. Sheffield had an apparent plurality of 125 over D. L. D. Granger as Congressman from the First district. This is a net loss of two from his standing Monday night.

The total vote announced by the board of the 20 voting districts outside of Providence gave Sheffield 6,327 and Granger 4,372, whereby Sheffield comes up to the Providence count with an actual or official plurality of 1,955. According to the warden's figures, carefully verified, for the 59 districts of this city, Providence gave Granger 13,728 and Sheffield 11,893, a plurality for the former of 1835.

Assuming that the warden's figures are practically correct, Sheffield has an apparent plurality of 120. But in the first three districts of ward 1 of Providence counted by the board, Sheffield made a net gain of 8, although he suffered a net loss of 2 on the entire day's count.

The board resumed its counting promptly at 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and before adjournment at 5 had counted New Shoreham, two districts of Tiverton, Warren and three districts of Providence, which is the most counted any day thus far.

New Shoreham was the first package opened and the count gave Mr. Sheffield a new gain of one over the warden's return, the board's total being 124 for Sheffield and 164 for Granger. The warden's count was 124 and 165, respectively. In Tiverton Mr. Sheffield sustained a net loss of three so that his plurality to date is 125.

The board declared J. Eugene Littlefield elected Senator from New Shoreham by a vote of 155 and Ray O. Lewis, Representative by a vote of 167. The warden's figures were: Littlefield 154 and Lewis 170.

The board's count of the congressional vote in Tiverton's First district agreed exactly with the election officer's figures, Sheffield 229, Granger 76. In this district it was found that 27 of the voters had marked their ballots for no one except Frost and Hart, who ran on a Citizen's ticket for the General Assembly.

Thomas Cooney, who represented Mr. Granger, raised an objection when this district was counted, claiming that one Sheffield vote had been registered on the automatic counting machine twice, but there being no second to Mr. Dorkey's motion for a recount of the mixed ballots cast in the district, Mr. Cooney's request was ignored and when the totals were announced they were found to be exactly the same as those returned by the warden.

In the Second district of Tiverton the board's count reduced Sheffield's vote one, making it 163, and added two to Granger's, making his total in the district 66, a net loss for the Republican of three.

Warren's count gave Sheffield a total of 481 and Granger 380, being a loss of three for Sheffield, while Granger gained five over the warden's count, making a net gain of eight for Granger. In this town Pothier lost five for Governor and Arnold gained one, making a net gain for the latter of six.

It was 3:30 o'clock when the board began the count of district 1 of ward 1 of Providence, in which 514 votes were cast. Here were found 22 straight Republican ballots and 41 straight Democratic. Sheffield received 304, a gain of six, and Granger 187, a gain of two, giving the former a net gain of four over Granger. The greatest loss for any individual candidate in this district was for Robert Grieve, Democratic candidate for secretary of state, whose vote of 132 as returned by the warden's count was reduced to 84.

In district 2 ward 1 there was no certificate from the warden accompanying the package of ballots, so that the board had to take the count as they made it. The warden will be summoned to produce his certificate of returns before the result in this district is officially announced. The board's figures were 189 for Sheffield and 202 for Granger, while the returns furnished by the warden on the night of the election and later verified at the city hall were 159 and 203, respectively. This is a gain of one for Sheffield.

District 3 of Ward 1 gave Sheffield 245, as compared with 243 by the warden's figures, and Granger 250, as compared with 251. This made a net gain of three for Sheffield. A summary of the afternoon's count by the board gave Granger a gain of 11 over the warden's figures and Sheffield a gain of nine, making Granger's net gain two and leaving Sheffield's apparently plurality 128.

SENTENCED TO STATE PRISON.

Two Respectable New York Youths Guilty of Boston Robbery.

BOSTON, Nov. 11.—Two New York youths, William P. Duncan, 19 years of age, and Joseph Moran, 20, were given state prison sentences after pleading guilty of robbery in the superior criminal court today. Duncan was sentenced to a term of six to eight years, while Moran was given seven to nine years.

October 24 the young men held up at the point of a pistol Ernest P. Jenkins, clerk at the Hotel Touraine, as he was walking up Columbia road in the Dorchester district. They took from him a watch and a small sum of money, and then made off. Jenkins hailed a taxicab and a policeman and gave chase. Duncan was overtaken and Moran was arrested later at his lodgings at Worcester square, in the South End.

The two young men were indicted Saturday for robbery, being armed, the penalty for which may be life imprisonment. By agreement with the district attorney's office the prisoners pleaded guilty to a simple charge of robbery and were sentenced today by Judge Schofield. It is understood that both men belong to respectable New York families.

BRATTLEBORO SCHOOLS CLOSED.

Children Have Mild Form of Small Pox, Not Chicken Pox.

BRATTLEBORO, Vt., Nov. 11.—Following the discovery that a number of children supposed to be suffering from chicken pox, are, in reality, afflicted with a mild form of small pox, Dr. Henry G. Holton of this place, secretary of the state board of health, today ordered all the schools, both public and parochial, closed until November 30. This will affect between 890 and 1,000 pupils.

The first case was noticed November 1, and since then about 30 boys and girls have been taken ill. Dr. Holton became suspicious of the nature of the illness, and today, in company with Dr. Charles P. Caverley of Rutland, president of the state board of health, he visited seven of the patients. A careful examination showed that they are undoubtedly suffering from small pox. Dr. Holton stated that an order would be issued that all churches, halls and other places of public gatherings must remain closed while the epidemic prevails. No fatalities are anticipated, as all the cases which have thus far developed are of a mild type.

Holland Says President Castro Is Responsible for Consequences.

WILLEMSTAD, Curacao, Nov. 11.—The official organ of the colonial government made public yesterday all the notes exchanged between Venezuela and The Netherlands in the course of the difficulties between the two countries. Excepting the actual phraseology, they contain nothing not already known.

Holland declares that the fact that Venezuela has not revoked the decree prohibiting the transshipment of goods destined for Venezuela at Curacao, as demanded, gives her full liberty of action, and that President Castro is responsible for the consequences.

[Otis Skinner, in American Magazine.]

But few people knew Edwin Booth—the man. The actor had his hosts of acquaintances and several generations of worshippers. He was fond of a small knot of professional associates, with whom, over a cigar, he could lapse into the past of his recollections. I have often watched his eyes, the Hamlet eyes, that were wont to hold a world of pensive, sad suggestion, slowly brightening under the influence of genial talk until they reached the twinkling stage. With upward lines would appear at their corners, the brows above strike a humorous angle, the ends of his thin-lipped mouth commence to twitch, and I knew that coming from the depths of his memories was a quaint recital of stage life, perhaps of his days of vagabondage, and that the tale would be voiced in a low, somewhat tired tone, without ever a touch of bravura or climatic effect. His quiet chuckles denoted how keenly he enjoyed living over these episodes of humor. I sometimes wondered how much of gloom and melancholy over-lay these little springs of joy. The troubled and sensitive soul we guessed at, but there were few to whom it was ever frankly revealed.

There is one glimpse of his brooding spirit that stands fixed in my memory. It did not come from his own lips, but from those of an old property man who had begun active life as a general errand boy about Booth's Theatre that stood on Twenty-third street. He was called "Garrie." His chief occupation was as "basket boy," in which capacity he conveyed the costumes and properties of the actors and and from their lodgings and the theatre. Mr. Booth was very fond of Garrie, and employed him frequently in his own personal service.

It was well known how terrible a blow to the tragedian had been the assassination of President Lincoln by his brother John. For a time it was feared that it would seriously affect his reason. He was abnormally sensitive to the remotest reference to it.

At some time prior to the great tragedy at Washington the theatrical wardrobe and personal effects of John Wilkes Booth had been confided to the care of John McCullough, between whom and the former there had grown up a close and sympathetic acquaintance, and conveyed by him across the United States border into Canada. I have never heard it hinted that McCullough was at any time a party to the Lincoln conspiracy, or that he was trusted by John Wilkes, and that he stood ready to render his friend a service in an hour of whose true import he, no doubt, was ignorant, is evidenced by the fact that this wardrobe trunk was in his possession during his Canadian engagements, before and after the assassination. McCullough probably concealed and abandoned it very soon after the cry for vengeance arose against all sorts of real and alleged conspirators. It was not a safe thing for an actor to have about while members of his craft were being looked upon with suspicion and fanatics advocated placing the entire dramatic profession under arrest. However, I have not been able to verify that part of the trunk's history. It was a number of years later, in 187?, that Edwin Booth learned of its existence, and it was forwarded at his request by McKee Rankin, the actor, who was then engaged professionally in the province.

Garrie is still living and active; I will tell the story, as nearly as I can remember, just as Garrie told it to me:

"It happened early in '7?. The day had been one of storm and drifting snow, one of those belated days in New York when winter forgets to become spring. Mr. Booth had a snug suite of apartments high up over the stage, in which most of his time was spent between his hours of business and acting in the theatre.

"'Richard III' was on for a short run and had drawn a fine audience that night in spite of the storm. And say! how he had played! Familiar as I was with his performance I found myself again and again standing in the wings watching him.

"On leaving his dressing-room about 12 o'clock, he gave me orders to wake him at three in the morning.

"After the lights of the theatre had been put out, I lay on a cot in the property room, but I couldn't sleep—I shouldn't have dared.

"Then, too, I got very nervous listening to the slow beating on the window panes and to the strange sounds that seemed to come from every part of the big empty theatre. The memory of his performance that night kept haunting me. How wonderful it had been! There was a little clock on a shelf opposite my couch, and I watched its slow-moving hands by the light of a lantern on the floor. Mighty glad I was when the time to call him arrived; the three hours from midnight had been the longest I ever knew.

"I mounted the stairway to his apartment, where over a spirit-lamp in the pantry I proceeded to make some strong coffee. This done I opened the door of his bedroom. He was breathing heavily in a deep sleep. Mr. Booth had one peculiarity—he was confused and irritated if suddenly waked from sleep; sometimes he would throw the nearest thing at hand at the one who had roused him.

"As a precaution I removed the lamp, the pipe and the book with which he had smoked and read himself to sleep, his tobacco-jar (you know he was a great smoker), and all the novelties from the reading-stand beside his bed, even his boots I placed across the room. Then I shook him gently by the shoulder and told him the time. As I expected, he sat up dazedly and reached about for something to throw at me; but it was only for a moment that his wits were dazed. He sat for a few minutes looking down across the foot of his bed very still and thoughtful. I fetched the coffee I had made. After drinking two cups of it he asked about the weather.

"'Still snowing, Garrie?'

"'Yes, sir.'

"'It's three o'clock, you say?'

"'Yes, sir.'

"I helped him into his coat (he had lain down partly dressed), and took the lantern.

"'Where are you going, Mr. Booth?' I asked.

"'To the furnace-room, Garrie,' he said.

"So I led the way down the stairs, across the black stage, and into the cellar. The theatre building was erected before the days of general steam heat, and the furnace-room was a cavernous place of vaulted brick, which held the big, old-fashioned heater that warmed it.

"Briggs, the fireman, had raked and banked his fire and had gone home for the night, when the performance was over, but now the furnace drafts were roaring again.

"I lighted a single gas-jet, and it made a bright spot in the gloom. Over near the furnace I saw an unusually large trunk, almost like a packing case, tied with ropes; there were seals on it, some on the cords, some at the edges where the cover and the body of the trunk met.

"'I shall want an axe, Garrie,' said Mr. Booth. There was one in the corner by the coalbins, and when I had found it I was told to cut the cords of the trunk and knock off the top. This was but little work, for the box was rickety and old. The lid was soon off, and out came a smell of camphor and musty fabrics. There they lay, the costumes of John Wilkes Booth. Edwin must have told someone about the receipt of his brother's trunk, for the story had got about the theatre. I didn't have to ask whose wardrobe it was. I shouldn't have had the courage to do so, anyway; Mr. Booth's manner, the scary cellar, and the weird hour of the morning weren't things that made for conversation.

"There was no tray in the trunk—the dresses lay solidly packed and on the top of the pile were some swords and wigs. For a few moments he stood looking down at the things, then he laid the wigs and swords aside on the overturned trunk cover, and commenced taking out the costumes. The first was a Louis XVI coat of steel-blue broadcloth, embroidered with flowers in silk—probably John Wilkes's Claude Melnotte coat, I thought, and was aching to ask, but I said nothing. He turned it about at arm's length, as if he were fancying his brother's figure in it, and perhaps remembering when he saw it worn last. Then he handed it to me. 'Put it in there,' he said, pointing to the heater. I opened the furnace door—the coals were all red and blazing. I paused for a little—it was such a shame to destroy so handsome a garment—and looked back at him, but he was as still as a statue—just waiting. There was no help for it—I threw it in. It settled down on the blaze with a sort of a hiss—a bit of the lace at the sleeve caught and the coat was in flames. We watched it without a word until it was nothing but a spread of real film in the blue coal flames. A satin waistcoat, a pair of knee breeches, and several pairs of tights were next taken out, and they followed the coat. He didn't spend much time over these; merely handed them to me and motioned toward the fire.

"After these there was a black-bordered Hamlet hauberk, which Mr. Booth turned affectionately about before he passed it to me. It needed but little guessing to know how hard it was for him to part with it. Then there came some 'shape' dresses of the Elizabethan period, and some fine silk hose and velvet shoes. They may have been worn for Iago—he had played the part. There were cavalier's costumes, such as are used in 'The Hunchback' or 'The Duke's Motto.' These had seen much service and showed their wear for John Wilkes's most successful performances, with the exception of his 'Richard III,' had been in the romantic plays. One, particularly striking, was a cut-leather jerkin with slashed green velvet sleeves, a sword to match studded with [illegible] — the velvet trunks like the sleeves and a broad-brimmed hat with a handsome ostrich feather. These, with a pair of cavalier boots, went to the funeral pyre. Then his Roman things for Marc Antony, the velvet and gray [illegible] he had worn for Raphael in 'The Marble Heart.' His costumes for Romeo, Shylock, Macbeth, and a costume [illegible] for Othello made of [illegible] — some one could have pulled them through a little bracelet.

"Pinned to a cloth was a starting [illegible] — with a photograph of John Wilkes in the same costume, dated Richmond, Va. [illegible], I guessed the part to be Melnotte.

"It was agonizing being through [illegible] Mr. Booth [illegible] to take it [illegible] as if it were his own flesh and blood, before handing it to me to be burned. Sometimes [illegible] through the furnace door [illegible] a swarm of floating sparks into the [illegible] of the cellar space, and I was led [illegible] to see that they did not set fire to the building. He didn't notice them; his gaze was fixed on the flames and his face was drawn and white.

"Presently he came across a package of old letters, wrapped in a handkerchief and tied with a faded pink ribbon. As he examined their addresses I glanced over his shoulder, and could see that they were directed to his brother, and some of them in what seemed to be a woman's handwriting. He had looked over only a few when his eye flashed, his lips pressed together, and crushing the package in his hands he moved quickly past me and threw it angrily on the coals. This was the first time he had been moved out of the calm which he had held since we began. 'Twas like some of the flashes of anger in his performance of 'Othello.' But it was over in a moment—temper was always that way with him. Since that night I often wondered who had written those letters. No one will ever know.

"Finally he drew out of the trunk a long, belted, purple-velvet 'shirt,' ornamented with jewels and gilt lace, and a like colored robe made to attach to the shoulders. Both garments were much creased, and in places the fabric was worn threadbare. He held them out for a moment, then sat down on the edge of the trunk with the costume on his knees. For fully a minute he didn't move, and as he sat looking at the costume, his eyes filled with tears, which ran down his cheeks, falling on the tinsel trappings. After a while he glanced up at me, as if for the first time he was aware that anyone was near him.

"'My father's!' he said, voice hoarse and shaking. 'Garrie, it was my father's "Richard III" dress. He wore it in Boston the night I first went on the stage as "Tressell."'

"'Don't you think you ought to save that, Mr. Booth?' I ventured to ask. He became quieter. 'No—put it with the others.' In a few minutes it was nothing but ashes. I felt as if I had assisted in a crime.

"He didn't linger so long with the various articles after this, except now and then to pause over a costume as if he were puzzling his brain to recall what part it had been used for. It was curious how eager he was to see every fragment destroyed. I was obliged to turn the flaming mass over so frequently with the long furnace poker that my face and hands were scorched with the heat. Sometimes he took the iron rod himself. When the bottom of the trunk had been reached and the last garment a couple of finely wrought daggers, broken scraps of stage jewelry, and various odds and ends, which, strangely enough, included a pair of woman's pink satin dancing slippers, were thrust in on the coals. I threw in the wigs and the swords that lay upon the cover—they would break and melt before the fire could be mended again. At the last I was directed to knock the trunk to pieces, and these, with the cords that had bound the box, were the final contribution to the flames. We stood for a few moments, silently watching the snaky runs running through the feathery ashes and the sword blades glowing to a molten heat, then he bade me shut the furnace door. The sacrifice was complete—complete with one exception—a simple wreath of bays tied with a broad white ribbon. 'Twas his one memento.

"'That will do,' he said quietly. 'We will go back.'

"I looked at my watch. It was nearly [illegible].

"The morning was still black; the storm had not broken, the wind was howling through the streets outside. Somewhere a shutter, loose and creaking, was being flung now and then by the wind against the side of the building, [illegible] of its blows went [illegible] through the empty galleries.

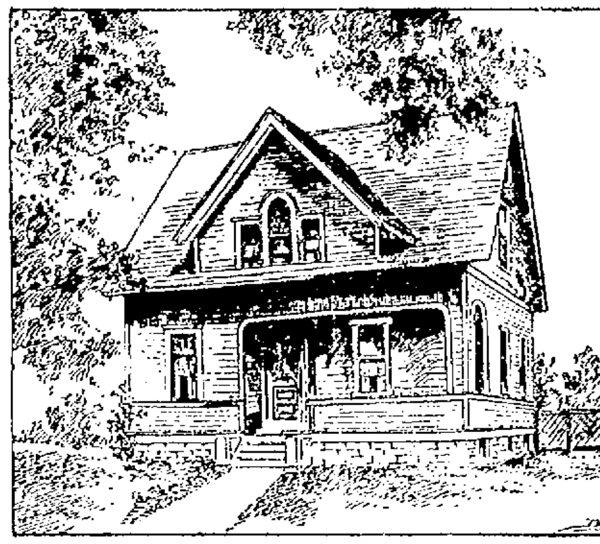

"What emotion had arisen during [illegible] in the furnace-room had [illegible] and his face had [illegible] set look of gentle [illegible]. We came up to the stage [illegible] the stairway leading to [illegible] 'You needn't come, Garrie. [illegible],' he said.

"I ventured a 'Good morning, sir,' [illegible] he merely nodded, and I stood at the foot of the stairs with my lantern [illegible] heard his door shut above."

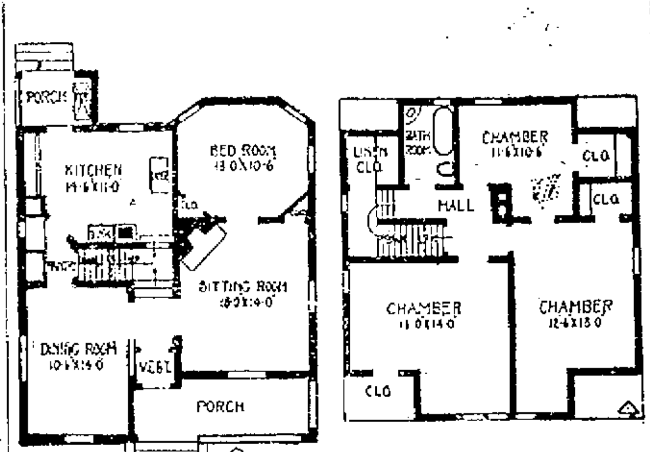

[illegible] Garrie [illegible] story of [illegible] Edwin Booth placed the seal on [illegible] of his brother's memory.

UNLOADED IN HUGE AMOUNTS.

Harriman Pacific Railroad Stock Prices Break Violently.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—A violent break in prices of the stocks of the Harriman Pacific railroads caused a feverish tone in the early stock market today. These stocks were unloaded in enormous amounts by speculators, who bought them yesterday on rumors that dividends were to be advanced at the directors' meetings today. Yesterday's rumors were discredited over night, and the belief prevailed that only the regular dividends would be declared.

Soon after the opening Southern Pacific sold down to 116¼, compared with 117⅞ at the close last night and 119⅝ at the highest yesterday. The low price for Union Pacific on the break was 174⅝, compared with 181 at the close last night and 181⅝ at the highest yesterday. The whole market declined in sympathy, losses running from 2 to 2 points in the active stocks. Support became effective in the course of the first half hour, and prices rallied, with the effect of quieting the activity, which had been at a furious rate.

By the time the action of the directors in declaring regular dividends on Southern Pacific and Union Pacific had been announced the speculative selling in those stocks seemed to be concluded. This was after Southern Pacific had declined 3 and Union Pacific 2⅝. In the rally of prices which followed there was a diversion to low-priced railroad stocks, which had its inception in Erie.

BUSINESS TO GO ON AS USUAL.

American Tobacco Chief Issues Letter to Stock and Bondholders.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—James B. Duke, President of the American Tobacco Company, today issued a letter to the stockholders and bondholders of that company calling their attention to the recent decision of the United States circuit court of this city, that the company is a combination in restraint of trade. Mr. Duke announced that the business of the company will proceed as usual, pending an appeal to the Supreme Court. It is gratifying, he declared, that the court found that "our methods and success have not injured the consumers of tobacco, but have greatly benefited the producers of leaf tobacco, by giving a larger market and higher prices, and that we have not resorted to unfair or oppressive competition."

Mr. Duke added: "The only particular in which this court has decided against the company is on a matter the facts of which this company never contested, and with reference to which it is the same condition as most of the larger corporations, as well as many of the small corporations and copartnerships doing business in the country."

WANTED IN CANADA.

"Portland Fatty" Among Men Arrested in New York Chinatown.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—When several central office detectives, who were strolling through Chinatown the other night looking for suspicious characters, took into custody a party of four men because they had recognized two of them as safe blowers, one of the strangers, who described himself as George W. Monroe of Cumberland, Me., made a touching plea for freedom. He knew nothing of the men in whose company he had been found, he said, and the fact that two of them had police records came to him as a great shock. Today Monroe, or, as the police say he is better known, "Portland Fatty," is in a cell awaiting the call of Canadian officials, who wish to take him across the border to tell what he knows of the robbery of a bank in Quebec. In the pockets of the prisoner the police found a number of certificates marked "La Banque, Province St. Raphael, Canada." Inquiry developed that the bank was robbed October 23. The Canadian authorities were notified of the arrest of "Portland Fatty," and two officers came here today to attempt to bring about his extradition to Canada.

KNOWN BY PORTLAND POLICE.

Records Do Not Mention "Portland Fatty," as He Was Not in Custody.

PORTLAND, Me., Nov. 11.—While George W. Monroe, otherwise known as "Portland Fatty," under arrest in New York city on suspicion of being connected with a bank robbery in Canada, never was in custody in this city, he was known by police officers. It was believed by them that he had been connected with breaks in different sections of the country, and when he was in this city he was watched. He was under middle age, short and stout. The police records contained no mention of him.

GUILD'S APPOINTMENTS.

Walter B. Snow a Member of Massachusetts Commission for Blind.

BOSTON, Nov. 11.—At a meeting of the executive council today Governor Guild sent in the following nominations: Walter Bradlee Snow of Watertown, member of the Massachusetts commission for the blind; Paul H. Provandee, M. D., of Melrose, assistant medical examiner for Middlesex county, Third district; William O. Faxon, M. D., of Stoughton, medical examiner for Norfolk county, Fifth district; John M. Merriam of Framingham, trustee of the Westboro Insane Hospital. Seven trustees of the hospital for the metropolitan district were also appointed.

UNVEILED BY THREE WOMEN.

Valor of Massachusetts Soldiers Commemorated by Newbern Shaft.

NEWBERN, N. C., Nov. 11.—In the presence of a representative assemblage, including veterans of both the Union and Confederate armies, a monument commemorating the valor of the soldiers of Massachusetts who are buried here was dedicated today. The shaft was erected under a provision of the Massachusetts legislature. William D. Chapple, president of the Massachusetts senate, and a delegation of citizens who served in Massachusetts regiments during the war were present. Mayor Bryan of Newbern delivered a welcoming address. Captain A. A. Putnam of the Second Massachusetts artillery delivered an address, and "The Blue and the Gray" and other patriotic songs enlivened the program. The monument was unveiled by Mrs. Dugan, Mrs. Hartsfield and Miss Sprague.

Governor Guild was detained at home by illness, and was represented by Brigadier General William H. Brigham, his chief of staff. The Confederate veterans, the Daughters of the Confederacy and Children of the Confederacy organizations, the Kinston (N. C.) Rifles and the Newbern Naval Reserves participated in the exercises. All schools and banks and many business houses were closed. After the exercises the Daughters of the Confederacy entertained the visitors with a banquet. The principal address on behalf of the state of Massachusetts was delivered by William D. Chappell.

SCENE OF DEATH AND DESOLATION.

Tearing up underskirts, they hastily swathed the wounds of the injured in bandages which stopped the flow of blood.

Such was the state of affairs when the first train arrived from New Orleans with surgeons, nurses and medical stores. Some of those who first reached the wreck undertook to complete a list of the dead and injured, but in some instances bodies could not be identified.

A partial list of the dead follows: Charles Routh, teacher, 49 years of age, Alton, La.; William Martin, 50, Slidell; George Edleson, 40, Slidell; Lowry, Chicago, commercial traveler; Ottaway, a child, home in Slidell.

FOUR DEATHS FROM COLLISION.

New Haven Wreck May Have Been Due to Improper Flagging.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 11.—Several Italian workmen were injured in a rear-end collision on the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad at Deep River yesterday, between a freight and a work train, and were taken to the New Haven hospital. They were reported to be in good condition this morning. With the death of two of the injured at the hospital last night the fatalities due to the wreck were increased to four, and it is not thought that the number will be increased, as all the injured, apparently, show signs of recovery.

Coroner Eli Mix continued today the investigation which he began last night into the wreck. Albert Mitchell of Hartford, conductor of the freight, is held by the coroner under $1,500 bonds. In discussing the wreck Coroner Mix expressed the opinion that it might have been due to lack of proper flagging by the freight train.

One of the dead Italians was Michael Torrilli, of No. 8 Bushwick avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.

CARS LEAVE THE RAILS.

Engineer and Fireman Seriously Burned in Pennsylvania Wreck.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 11.—Accommodation train No. 146 on the Monongahela division of the Pennsylvania railroad was wrecked today near the Pan Handle bridge over the Monongahela river. The engineer and fireman were seriously burned when the engine, tender and baggage car left the rails. The passengers were not injured.

THIRTY CARS PILED IN HEAP.

Six Persons Killed, Several Injured, in Wreck in Wyoming.

CHEYENNE, Wyo., Nov. 11.—Six persons were killed and three badly injured last night when Union Pacific extra freight, No. 273, east bound, collided with an engine and caboose at Borie, 11 miles west of Cheyenne. Thirty cars were piled in a heap with the engine underneath, and the wreckage took fire and burned fiercely. It is known that Engineer Schley, Conductor John Murphy and Fireman Christensen are among the dead. The body of Schley and an unknown person have been recovered. Four other bodies are still under the wreckage.

The freight train got beyond control of the brakes, and ran seven miles down a heavy grade to Borie, where the collision occurred.

HITCHCOCK CONGRATULATED.

One of Roosevelt's Guests at So-Called Political Luncheon.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—Chairman Frank H. Hitchcock of the Republican national committee reached here today from Hot Springs, Va., where yesterday he visited Mr. Taft. Mr. Hitchcock was an early caller at the White House, where he had a long chat with the President. It was the first time that the President had seen Mr. Hitchcock since the election, and he personally congratulated him upon the excellent service he performed, on behalf of the party, for the election of Mr. Taft. Mr. Hitchcock will leave for New York tonight, to wind up affairs at national headquarters, and afterward will return to Washington.

Mr. Hitchcock was one of a number of guests entertained by President and Mrs. Roosevelt at luncheon, the other guests being British ambassador and Mrs. Bryce, Secretary of War and Mrs. Wright, Vice President-elect James S. Sherman, Robert J. Wynne, consul general at London, and Mrs. Wynne; William L. Ward, Republican national committeeman from New York; Timothy L. Woodruff, Republican state chairman of New York; Seth Low of New York, William Berri of Brooklyn, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Pyle, Mr. and Mrs. John R. McLean and Dr. Albert Shaw of New York.

While it has been understood that the luncheon was to be of a political nature, the edge was taken off it by the inclusion of a number of other guests. However, the New York politicians remained with the President after the others had departed, and with him discussed politics. The presence of Chairman Woodruff and other New Yorkers who are deeply interested in the political situation in New York, and especially in connection with the election of a United States Senator to succeed Thomas C. Platt next March, lent color to the report that a candidate for the Senatorship was to be determined on today. The President already had secured the views of Herbert Parsons, chairman of the New York county committee, and of James Wadsworth, Jr., Speaker of the New York assembly, in this matter.

CROWDS AT NEW YORK SHOW.

Program Filled with Attractions for Spectators as Well as Horsemen.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—The horse show is again in full swing, and large crowds today gave an animated setting to the huge tanbark ring, round which high-class thoroughbreds showed their best paces, dispelling all doubts in the directors' minds that this year's show would be a success. Today's program was filled with attractive events for the idle spectator as well as for the expert horseman. Following the preliminary gallops of the horses during the early hours trotters were judged. Preliminary trials of a large class of hunters over four successive jumps five feet high was the event which was roundly applauded. Other numbers coming later in the day were judging of ponies in harness; harness horses, ladies to drive; saddle horses; horses shown to phaeton, for the Brewster prize; judging trotters; stallions, horses shown to runabouts, and another similar class for horses shown to broughams.

WILL REFUSE INVITATION.

Labor Federation Officials Will Resent Snub to Gompers.

DENVER, Col., Nov. 11.—The News today says: "President Roosevelt's snub to Gompers will be resented by John Mitchell, Daniel J. Keefe and James Duncan as soon as they receive the President's invitation to attend his executive dinner at the White House next Tuesday. These three members of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor yesterday decided that they will refuse the invitation. The invited officials decided that if President Roosevelt wanted to do anything in the interest of labor it must be done through the organization (The American Federation of Labor), recognized as the parent body of all unions in the country."

FINANCIAL.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11, Wall Street—The stock market opened irregular, with Amalgamated Copper at 86½, American Smelting 97, American Locomotive 56, Anaconda 52½ to 53¾, Atchison 94⅞, Baltimore & Ohio 106, Brooklyn Transit 53½, Canadian Pacific 178½ and 178¾, Chesapeake & Ohio 46½, Erie 34¼, Great Northern preferred 138¼, Great Northern Ore 71½, Missouri Pacific 61½, Missouri, Kansas & Texas 34, New York Central 113, Northern Pacific 151¼, Pennsylvania 123, Reading 139⅝, Rock Island 22⅝, St. Paul 146⅞, Sugar 135⅝, Southern Pacific 117⅜ to 117, Southern Railway 25⅝, Union Pacific 180⅝ to 179⅝, United States Steel 54½, United States Steel preferred 113⅞ and Wabash preferred 32⅞.

11—There was a good deal of irregularity in the opening stock market, caused by heavy realizing in some of the recent speculative favorites, while other stocks were advanced sharply. The opening in the Harriman Pacifics was wild, sales of 5,000 shares of Union Pacific being made at 180⅝ and 179⅝, compared with 181 at the close yesterday. The first sales of Southern Pacific were of 4,500 shares, all the way from 117⅜ to 117, as against 117⅞. Great Northern preferred opened 2 points lower. Amalgamated Copper 1½, American Smelting 1¼ and American Locomotive 1⅝. American Car preferred made a gain of 1⅝. Canadian Pacific 1⅝, Cleveland, C. C. & St. Louis and Utah Copper 1, and Kansas & Texas ⅝.

11—The rush to sell continued the collapse of the Harriman stocks, encouraging the professionals to sell heavily for both accounts. Lower prices were recorded before any serious effort was made to check the decline. Losses of 1 to 1½ were general. A feverish rally lifted prices sharply, but the list was sold frequently. Toward 11 o'clock Southern Pacific was driven to 115⅜, or more than 2 points below yesterday's closing. Union Pacific's ex- the less active stocks were pushed forward. Wells Fargo Express jumped 10 points, and Granby Mining 5.

Noon—Money on call, steady, at 1⅝ per cent; prime mercantile paper, 4 to 1½ per cent. The renewed decline was followed by the professionals with short sales, and when the liquidating sales diminished this element had to advance bids to cover shorts. A rally of a point or more from the lowest was the consequence. An advance of 1⅝ in Erie was an effective stimulant to the rally. The trading became dull on the rally. Bonds were easy.

BOYLE TO RUN FOR MAYOR.

His Application for Nomination Papers Answers Some Political Questions.

A number of questions in the political line were answered this morning, when Alderman P. J. Boyle took out nomination papers for mayor. Mr. J. P. Mahoney took out papers for alderman in the Third ward, also. There seems to be more in the city election line than there has been, and it looks as though there might be enough candidates to fill the offices, though thus far no paper has been taken out for School Committee.

Some nomination papers have been filed at the city clerk's office, including those of William O. Milne for alderman, Third ward; James H. Cottrell, alderman, Fourth ward, and James S. Cowles, alderman, Fifth ward. Abner L. Slocum is in for the two-year term for the Council vacancy in the Second ward and Laurence J. Barry of Wellington avenue, James H. Harrington of Simmons street and Charles Ewart of Morgan court for the Council from the Fifth ward.

Alderman Shepley's nomination papers for alderman from the Second ward have been filed.

THIRTEEN WRITHING VICTIMS.

Grand Lair of the Military Order of the Serpent Instituted Here.

After three hours of laughter for 18 veterans of the war with Spain and of the campaigns in the Philippines, Tuesday night, a Grand Lair of the Military Order of the Serpent was declared to be duly organized. Having been appointed Provisional Grand Gu Gu Grandississimo for the institution of the Grand Lair, Fred J. Buenzle prepared a typical Filipino bungalow up under the rafters of his American home on Second street, and there 13 United Spanish War Veterans (the perfect number in the order) gathered to be made wise by the five already slick and slimy serpents of Newport.

The order is founded on the tortures and customs of the Philippines and intended to provide the big organization with a little fun to mingle with the seriousness of the veteran main body. With its seat in Ohio, Massachusetts and California have recently formed lairs and now Rhode Island falls into line and the "foul larrie" of Newport has become the headquarters.

While last night's proceedings were appointed for a scheduled moonlight night, care was taken to have the introduction effected in a well enclosed bungalow, with nothing but the electric light to glare down upon the writhing forms. At a later period, when the degree team has become proficient in the manipulation of all horrors, a part of the initiations will be given in public, as provided by the scroll of the order.

It was in response to correspondence following the sending of a number of names to La Junta Nacional that the party gathered to accept the wise precepts of the Ram Shakhal of Dwawalagh Ghaggur, to bask in the future in the favor of the Great Khatteo Puna.

The officiating Snakes were William MacKay, Gu Gu Grandississimo; M. W. Hall, Ungodly Villain; F. J. Buenzle, Thrice Infamous Inferior Gu Gu; J. H. Johnson, Chief Ladrone, and Charles Saul, Lord High Keeper of the Sacred Amphora.

The Grand Lair instituted, the following officers were elected and installed:

Grand Gu Gu Grandississimo—Thomas Hardy.

Thrice Infamous Inferior Gu Gu—F. J. Buenzle.

Lord High Keeper of the Sacred Amphora—Peter Schiot.

Most Highest Ditto—Frank Brown.

Most Higher Ditto—J. A. Johnson.

Most High Ditto—J. E. Baker.

Chief Ladrone—J. Renteman.

Thrice Dulcet Yawler of the Jungle—J. Breen.

Insidious Thumper of the Sanctified Sheepshide—H. Peterson.

Lord High Compeller of the Sacred Bullcart—Charles Saul.

Dog Robber of the Unhallowed Lost—M. J. Sullivan.

It was "easy" last night for the Americanos, but a degree team will at once begin practice and it is hoped that their proficiency will develop so that when the department commander makes his rounds of the Department of Rhode Island they will be able to accompany him and on the tour institute a number of subordinate lairs about the state.

Already the order has enrolled among its writhing subjects many prominent men throughout the country, such as Admiral Coghlan and Captain Charles King, the writer of military stories. Starting with 18 members the lair is destined to increase its membership in this settlement rapidly, for there are a large number of "Camp Thomas" who are sending in their names, in their desire to share the fun.

It has been suggested that the institution of the order of the worshipers of his snakeship may explain the mystery of the sea serpent reported in this locality, and that the uncanny thing when sighted off shore was making his way to the bungalow to be present and personally meet his future subjects. It has not yet been reported that he was seen to enter the bay and make his way on shore to Second street, but there is no telling what will be told when sea serpent stories are current, especially when it is known to have been a gathering of the snakes [illegible] the site for the proposed naval hospital.

RECEPTION TO REV. MR. DICKEY.

New Rector at St. George's Church Welcomed by Members and the Clergy of the City.

Last evening the vestry of St. George's Church tendered a reception to the new rector, Rev. George Vernon Dickey, in the guild room, which was decorated with palms and cut flowers. The reception, which was in charge of Mr. David C. Caesar, upon whom it reflected much credit, was a novelty in that it was in the sole charge of the men of the parish, it being thought that the women, who do so much in the church, should feel care-free last night.

The guests were received by Rev. George V. Dickey, Mr. Peter King, senior warden, and Mr. William S. Slocum, junior warden, the ushers who introduced the large number present being Messrs. Fred W. H. Kalor, Leroy Hazard, John Taylor, John H. Mustard, Robert Miller and William MacMurtrie. After the reception, during which music was furnished by Good's Mandolin Orchestra, Mr. H. Wood Thompson, pianist, Rev. Emery H. Porter, D. D., Rev. Joseph Cooper and Rev. Stanley C. Hughes spoke brief words of hearty welcome to Mr. Dickey, who responded feelingly.

The speakers were pleasingly introduced by Mr. Kalor, Dr. Porter saying that it had become a fixed habit with him to attend the receptions at St. George's the people of which church know how to give a good reception to a new rector, as these receptions are so often given. The speaker brought a greeting from himself and his people and congratulated St. George's that the interval between rectors was so short. Bishop McVickar is strong in anticipations in regard to Mr. Dickey's rectorship and Dr. Porter believed that a good work which has never yet been done will be done fully and well under Mr. Dickey's rectorship.

REV. GEORGE VERNON DICKEY.

Rev. Joseph Cooper spoke of St. George's as an energetic church and of Mr. Dickey as a man who he felt sure would associate himself with the other ministers of the city to fight against iniquity in Newport.

The last speaker of the evening, Rev. Stanley C. Hughes, said he could vouch for Mr. Dickey since they had been students together at Princeton University. Mr. Hughes cordially congratulated the new rector upon a united and energetic parish and upon coming to Newport to live, where he would find loyal supporters.

In replying to the words of greeting extended him Rev. Mr. Dickey in simple but earnest words said he thanked God he had come to so good and loyal a people. He thanked the people for their greetings and said he would strive to do his duty daily, and the future would take care of itself.

After the words of welcome, ice cream and cake were served and Dr. H. H. Luther sang "When the Heart is Young," Mr. H. Wood Thompson accompanist. Miss Florence Carley also sang, Miss Dring accompanist, her selections being "In Spain," and "I love you truly."

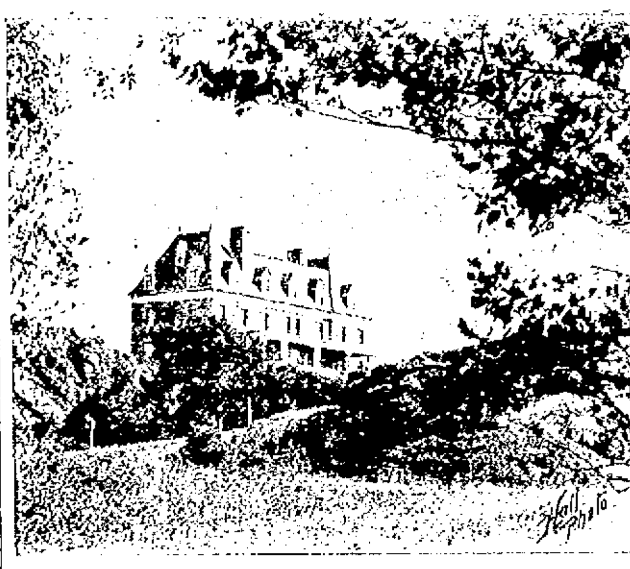

Among the large number at the reception others than the parishioners of St. George's were Rev. Oscar F. Moore, Jr., Dr. George W. Quick, Rev. Rev. Elory G. Bowers and Rev. W. S. Jones, of the clergy; Mr. W. H. Chapin of the Young Men's Christian Association and Mr. E. O. Andrews of the Army and Navy branch.

FIRST STUDY MEETING.

Mrs. Freeborne's Pupils Spend an Evening With Coleridge-Taylor and Elgar.

Mrs. Freeborne's first study evening of the season was spent with the "two most-talked-of English composers," Samuel Coleridge-Taylor and Sir Edward Elgar. Mrs. Freeborne spoke briefly in relation to the two men, so widely opposite in their personality and work, and, with two exceptions, the evening's music was devoted to them. Lists of the most important compositions were on two blackboards, for use in the note books and on a third board were themes, in yellow and white, of the Coleridge-Taylor folk-song transcriptions. Mrs. Freeborne alluded to the churchly style of composition for which English composers have hitherto been noted, and a table held numerous pictures of these men, from Purcell and Dr. Arne to the present day. The study evenings will be held on the second Tuesday evening of each month. Following is the program for last evening:

THE PANAMA CANAL.

Colonel Willard Speaks Before Members of Miantonomi Club.

An Interesting Account of Work Accomplished in the Zone Given in Address.

At the Miantonomi Club Tuesday evening a large number of members and guests listened to an interesting informal talk by Colonel Joseph H. Willard, U. S. A. (retired), on the Panama canal. The talk was given in the large assembly room in the third story of the club, which was well filled. Mr. Anthony Stewart, the president presided and introduced Colonel Willard, who for an hour or more held the close attention of his hearers with a talk, illustrated by charts, maps and diagrams, on the canal which the United States is building across the isthmus of Panama.

Colonel Willard said in beginning that there has always been a desire to find a passage between the Atlantic and Pacific oceans. As early as 1502 Christopher Columbus tried to find such a passage. Spain sent an expedition for the same purpose in 1517 and the English, Scotch and French in the four centuries have made similar attempts. The French began the work of building the canal on the isthmus and the United States has taken up the work, buying out the French and in doing so they did not buy a pig in a poke. What the French began the United States is finishing, and by 1915 the dream of the centuries is to come true.

Congress has determined the form of canal with locks, and the President is carrying out the plans. President-elect Taft knows the work from personal acquaintance and can be depended upon to carry out what has been begun. Colonel Willard while leaning strongly towards the advantages of a sea level canal, said that under the circumstances, the additional cost and the length of time that it would take to complete the excavation, the lock canal is probably the best which can be secured.

He spoke in detail of the work of the engineers, the excavation in the Culebra cut, the construction of the locks and dams, the immense work of the steam shovels, dredgers and transportation trains, giving the enormous figures of the excavations since the work—50,000 cubic yards daily. He was enthusiastic regarding the work in sanitation on the canal zone, the building of water works, cleansing of the streets, sewerage, paving in concrete brick and ahpsalt, the reclamation of marsh lands the destruction of the Malaria-bearing mosquitoes, and the general improvements of health conditions in the zone. He referred to the social conditions the building of residences, club rooms, Young Men's Christian Association buildings and churches, practically every religion having its place of worship; and also spoke of the many nationalities represented in the people at work on the canal, and the varying interests which must be cared for in this new Babel of nations.

Colonel Willard while approving the work on the canal, criticised some of the features of the plans. He did not approve the manner of filling the locks, believing that there will be no need of rush work in this direction and that the method of filling by large conduits from the bottom, was not a good one, saying it would be better to have numerous smaller conduits on the sides. The speaker thought the canal would not be safe against an enemy without a large military garrison extending the entire length. In conclusion Colonel Willard said the excavation for the canal is not the bugaboo which some persons have thought it, it will be completed all right, but the construction of the locks will be the difficulty.

Ex-Mayor Garrettson asked how long it will take to go through the canal. Colonel Willard said the locks would consume the greater part of the time. He thought probably an hour and a half would be sufficient to pass through.

Senator Sanborn asked if a sea-level canal would not have been better than a lock canal; Colonel Willard replied saying that it undoubtedly would have been, except for the increased cost and the longer time necessary to do the work. The sea-level canal would cost much less for operation.

At the conclusion of the talk, on motion of Mr. H. W. Lull, a vote of thanks was extended to Colonel Willard for his interesting talk, and the meeting was adjourned. However, a large number remained to look over the printed reports, and photographs and to examine closely the charts and diagrams showing the details of the work. Colonel Willard remained further to explain the work and answer questions which were asked.

Later in the evening Colonel Willard and other guests were entertained by the members in the club rooms.

To the Editor of the Daily News:

In answer to many inquiries, and in order to relieve the tension of the political situation, permit me through your columns to announce to the people of Middletown, that Messrs. Ward and Peckham, who on Friday last were declared by the State Returning Board as elected senator and representative to the General Assembly, have both filed notices in the town clerk's office of their refusal to serve, and that a warrant for a new election will be issued, to take place on Friday, December 4.

BASKET BALL AT FORT ADAMS.

Fort Adams is about to open the basket ball season with a team which promises to be the fastest ever representing the post. All dates are open, as no games have been arranged yet. The management would like to open the season with one of the strong teams in Newport and would like to hear from out-of-town teams as well.

The men who are to be on the team are all of no mean ability, having played on fast semi-professional teams throughout the eastern states. The line-up will be as follows:

THE HAYDEN TRIO COMPANY.

The Hayden Trio Concert Company, which will give the first in the Newport Artillery's course of entertainments, consists of Miss Eleanor Soule Hayden, who gives selections on the mandolin, organ chimes and xylophone; Edwin Byron Powell, violinist; Miss Nina Bearse Wilbur, reader and xylophonist, and Miss Edith Gertrude Wales, accompanist. The ability of Miss Hayden is shown by her artistic execution on the several instruments. The work of Mr. Powell is highly commended and Miss Wilbur has gained a wide reputation in Massachusetts as a reader. The program is varied enough to suit all tastes.

VANDERBILT WINS FOUR PRIZES.

Much Excitement at the Show Caused by His Horses in Four-in-Hand Entry.

At the New York horse show yesterday Alfred G. Vanderbilt won four prizes—one first, two second and one fourth, and Reginald C. Vanderbilt won one second prize. The latter's prize was won with Lord Burleigh and Lord Brooke in class for pairs, shown before a victoria, the blue ribbon going to C. W. Watson's My Maryland and My Maryland II.

Alfred G. Vanderbilt won first and second in the class for horses exceeding 15.2 hands that had not previously won at a national show. In this he showed his new horses Hertes and Hamlet, which won over C. W. Watson's Moonshine and the Nettledown Farm's The Emperor. Mr. Vanderbilt also won a second in the class for four-in-hands shown before a coach, drag or body brake. His team consisted of Hertes, Hamlet, Polly Prim and Pretty Peggy, who were beaten by C. W. Watson's Lord Baltimore, My Maryland, My Maryland II and Virginia.

In the four-in-hand class, Mr. Vanderbilt gave an exhibition of driving which thrilled the spectators. As he drove his prancing team into the ring he was greeted with applause, which ceased instantly when he drove the team too close to the south gate and the hub of his drag crashed against the woodwork, frightening the spirited animals. To add to the confusion the harness became disordered and the prancing horses were quickly tangled up in it.

It looked for a moment as if there would be a runaway, and the audience watched the young driver breathlessly as he controlled his team. Mr. Vanderbilt retained perfect composure, keeping a steady rein on the four frightened animals, and he succeeded in holding them in check long enough to permit two of his grooms to spring from the back of the drag and run to their heads. The tangle was quickly straightened out.

The accident won Mr. Vanderbilt the admiration of the spectators, and those standing at the ring side implored the judges to bestow the blue ribbon on the young millionaire for his display of pluck. But this was not to be. The best Mr. Vanderbilt could win was second place, behind C. W. Watson's Fairmont Farm team.

Mr. Vanderbilt's double victory with Hertes and Hamlet in the class for novice horses was one of the features of the day. The class was one of the strongest of the day. Though showing all the qualities of well-bred trotters, Mr. Vanderbilt's new horses are half bred hackneys from the Brockhold stud of W. Burdett Coutts, in England. Both are by Polonius, the foremost sire of harness horses in England and a son of the old horse Wildfire, imported by Mitchell Harrison, of Philadelphia, and shown by him at the Garden years ago.
